GUFFEY COAL BILL PASSED BY HOUSE; VOTE 194 TO 168

Stabilization Measure Sought by Roosevelt Goes to Senate Where Fate Is Uncertain.

TWO ROLL CALLS TAKEN ON PROPOSAL

Opponents in Lead at Times — Constitutional Objections Offered by Some Members.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The House passed this afternoon the Guffey bill to establish a "little NRA" for the bituminous coal industry. The vote was 194 to 168 with two voting present. The bill now goes to the Senate, where its fate is problematical.

Throughout much of the roll call, enemies of the legislation had been in the lead.

Although the President included the measure among those he wanted enacted before adjournment, there has been some speculation that it will have rough sledding after the tax legislation is concluded. Adjournment sentiment is believed by some to be too strong to make it possible to keep both branches in session, once a good part of the pending matters is cleared up.

Would Set Up Commission.

Under the measure, a new national bituminous coal commission would be set up to administer a wage, hour, trade practice and price-fixing code for the soft coal industry. It levies a 15 per cent tax on the value of coal at the mine shaft, allowing a 90 per cent "drawback" on that tax to those producers who abide by the code.

Sought by President Roosevelt to better conditions in the coal industry, the possibility that the bill would pass Congress has, at least twice, forestalled strikes in the soft coal fields.

It was opposed by many members, however, on the ground that it was unconstitutional. Those who took that attitude held that coal mining was strictly an intrastate operation, and that under the NRA-Schechter case decision the Federal Government had no control over operations which did not cross state lines.

President Sent Letter.

The President asked the committee handling the bill to forego even any "reasonable" doubts as to its constitutionality and let it become a law. The committee finally acceded, but on the roll call today 13 committeemen voted against the bill, 11 for it and one—Thompson of Illinois—failed to answer his name.

It had been opposed by Representatives of Southern congressional districts, who contended it would put their mines out of business.

On the vote, the list of the 433 members now sitting was called twice. At the end of the first round, the count stood 137 no and 131 aye. Immediately, backers of the bill went to work, getting a few members to change. Some, who had withheld the votes from the first call so as to vote for the bill if their ballots were needed to put it over.

Republicans Voting for Bill.

Republicans for the bill were: Burdick, North Dakota; Dirksen, Illinois; Doutrich, Pennsylvania; Fenerty, Pennsylvania; Focht, Pennsylvania; Gilchrist, Iowa; Jenkins, Ohio; Lemke, North Dakota; Marcantonio, New York; Robsion, Kentucky; Taylor, Tennessee; Thurston, Iowa; Turpin, Pennsylvania; Welch, California; Wolverton, New Jersey.

Buckler, Kvale and Lundeen, all Farmer-Labor of Minnesota, voted aye.

The following Illinois Representatives also voted aye: Beam, Brennan, Dobbins, Keller, Kocialkowski, McAndrews, McKeough, Mason, Weeks, Mitchell, O'Brien, Parsons, Sabath.

Among Democrats voting against the bill were: Bell, Cannon, Hennings and Williams of Missouri and Schaefer and Schuetz of Illinois.

Unofficial Reports Say No One Was Hurt; Blaze Breaks Out in Frame Building.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Fire today damaged part of Berlin's Radio Exposition. The visitors made a rush for its exits. Unofficial reports said all got out safely. The fire broke out as the hall, a large frame building, was being closed for the day.

The fire, of undetermined origin, started in hall No. 4 where radio and technical accessories were shown.

An unusually large crowd visited the exposition today, numerous special trains bringing visitors from all parts of Germany. In the three days since the exposition opened, more than 115,000 admissions had been registered.

RUSSIA ORDERS DEPORTATION OF POLISH NEWS WRITER

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—The Soviet Government today ordered the immediate deportation of Jan Otmar Berson, Moscow correspondent of the Polish Telegraphic Agency and of the Gazeta Polska, semi-official Warsaw newspaper. The Communist party newspaper Pravda explained he was accused of sending false information and mocking the Soviet people.

Berson was accused specifically by Pravda of reporting that monkeys and humans were being crossed on the experimental farm at Sukhum in the Caucasus "to improve the next generation of the Soviet population."

Pravda also stated he mocked the Soviet youth in his accounts of the recent annual physical culture parade, declared the Soviet Union had territorial designs on Poland, and called the Russians "champion liars."

ITALY CLOSES COMMODITY EXCHANGES IN TEN CITIES

Rigid Control Result of Movements in Preparation for Ethiopian Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 19.—The Official Gazette today announced the suppression by royal decree of commodity exchange markets in 10 cities—Bologna, Florence, Fiume, Genoa, Milan, Naples, Padua, Turin, Trieste and Venice.

The decree said the action was taken because the exchanges "no longer responded to the needs of the market." It was interpreted as a move to bring the dealings in merchandise more closely under the control of the Government.

The necessity of exercising this control with increasing rigidity has resulted from the vast exchanges of goods occasioned by preparations for the East African military campaign.

HOPSON PLAYED ON HEART STRINGS IN UTILITY FIGHT

SENATORS CONTRAST IDEAS WITH FACTS

Stock Had Dropped From $75 to 25 Cents With Magnate Siphoning Millions to Own Firms.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—"Appeal to sympathy and emotion—not to reason. Tell 'em about the widows and orphans, the aged and indigent, whose savings will be wiped out if the bill passes," was the succinct advice which Howard C. Hopson gave subordinates who were directing Associated Gas and Electric system's advertising campaign against the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company bill.

When Chairman Hugo Black of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee today produced telegrams containing Hopson's salty instructions, the magnate made no bones about it.

"Certainly I told them that," he said. "An emotional appeal was being directed against us, and the only way to meet it was by using the same weapon."

How Widows Fared.

Further questioning, however, elicited the fact that long before the bill was introduced, the value of Associated stock had declined from $75 to 25 cents a share, and that during the period when the savings of "the widows and orphans, the aged and indigent" were vanishing, Hopson was siphoning millions out of the system through the medium of personally-owned service corporations with which Associated made contracts.

Since Hopson dominated Associated, he was, in effect, entering into contracts with himself, and paying himself off with the stockholders' money. He said, in reply to a question, that he saw nothing wrong about that.

Today's session, which brought renewed threats to cite Hopson for contempt because of his insolent answers, resulted in fresh evidence of his attempts to influence newspapers and other publications against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. His principal device was to bestow or withdraw advertising, and he did both without hesitation.

In Wake of M'Intyre Incident.

As a result of Wednesday night's incident, when Senate Sergeant-at-arms Jurney inadvertently discovered presidential secretary Marvin McIntyre and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lawrence W. Robert in the hotel suite of B. B. Robinson, Associated's Washington lobbyist, Senator Gibson (Rep.), Vermont, said today he would ask the other four members of the committee to subpena Robinson, and after hearing his testimony, to consider calling both McIntyre and Robert.

Gibson wants to know not only what these two high administration officials were doing in the company of a man employed to defeat an administration measure, but he wants them to describe the unusual efforts that were made to keep the incident out of the newspapers.

Warned About Long Speeches.

Two days of rest seemed to have revived Hopson's drooping spirits, and he exhibited some of his old spunk this morning. He insisted on making long speeches in response to simple questions until, finally, Chairman Black rose from his chair, rapped the table sharply, and said:

"You are going to answer questions without making arguments. This has gone far enough. If you don't stop it at once, I shall adjourn this hearing and take the matter up with the Senate."

With one contempt citation hanging over his head, Hopson did not care to risk another, and he subsided, at least for the time.

Rewards for Papers.

Under Black's persistent questioning, Hopson told how he sought to reward newspapers which opposed the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, and to punish those which favored it. Associated withdrew its advertising from the Miami Herald. Subsequently, that paper published an editorial opposing Federal regulation of utilities, and used an interview with Hopson, illustrated with his photograph. Thereupon Hopson ordered the advertising restored, with enough more to compensate for what it had lost.

Hopson, apparently a tireless newspaper reader, saw something favorable about the bill in a syndicated column, "Washington Whirl-

SIX KILLED IN BESSARABIA IN 'CALENDAR WAR' RIOT

Opponents of Gregorian System Storm Jail Seeking Release of Several Agitators.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 19. — The Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Bucharest reported today that six persons were killed and 12 seriously injured in a riot near Ceteteа-Alba, Bessarabia.

He reported that the riot was the culmination of the "calendar war" waged for some time in Rumania between the adherents of the Julian system and the authorities who are enforcing the adoption of the Gregorian.

The riot resulted when 1000 proponents of the Julian calendar stormed a jail seeking the release of several agitators arrested yesterday. Those killed were four peasants and two police.

WOMAN WILL NOT BEAR ARMS, CITIZENSHIP PLEA DISMISSED

Petition of British Subject Thrown Out Although She Supports Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—A petition for citizenship filed by Mrs. Gertrude Annas, wife of a Corning (N. Y.) clergyman and mother of two children, was dismissed in Federal Court today because Mrs. Annas, although willing to uphold the Constitution, would not promise to bear arms in time of war.

Mrs. Annas, a British subject, was told by Judge Hugh D. McLellan that he was bound to dismiss her petition in view of Supreme Court decisions in such cases. She said she did not want to fight in the event of war because her own youth had been overshadowed by war. Bombing raids by German dirigibles on London, where she was at school, she said, had made a horrible impression on her.

J., Aug. 19.—A committee of Rutgers University trustees reported today it had found no substantiation of charges that Leinhard Bergel, member of the faculty of the New Jersey College for Women, failed of reappointment because of his anti-Nazi views. The committee affirmed the decision of university officers not to retain Bergel after June 30, 1935.

The report also stated that allegations of anti-Semitism and pro-Naziism on the women's college campus were unfounded and affirmed the contention of Dr. Frederick J. Hauptmann, head of the German department, Bergel was dismissed "because he did not possess the attitude or qualities desired in a member of the staff.

6 SEAMEN KILLED AS SHIPS COLLIDE IN IRISH CHANNEL

Victims Crushed in Their Bunks as Cunard Liner Laurentic and Cargo Steamer Crash in Fog.

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 19.—Six seamen were killed and five others were injured in a bow-to-bow collision of the Cunard liner Laurentic and the Blue Star steamer Napier Star in the fog-covered Irish Channel yesterday.

The Laurentic, carrying 620 passengers, and the Napier Star limped back to Liverpool in the tow of tugs, and docked safely in the afternoon. Both were damaged badly.

The ships collided 60 miles out of Liverpool a few hours after the Laurentic had embarked on a fortnight's cruise of northern capitals.

The Napier Star, partly loaded with cargo, was en route from Glasgow to Liverpool to complete the loading.

The ships locked with a grinding smash that tore a long hole down the Laurentic's bow side, crushing the men as they slept in their bunks.

The bow of the Napier Star was smashed in for 20 feet and its forecastle housing was carried away. When it arrived in port its forward winches were hanging over the side.

None of its crew was injured, since the men were sleeping aft at the time of the collision.

The bunks of the Laurentic's crew could be seen through the gap in its side as the ship lay at dock last night. It was in these bunks that the sleeping men were trapped.

Despite the knowledge that had the ships met 20 feet nearer the Laurentic's center a hole would have been torn in the middle of the first-class quarters, the passengers were calm and unexcited when they disembarked.

The cruise was called off and the passengers were put on special trains for London. Among them were several members of the nobility.

Neither ship sent out an SOS.

SENATE WOULD ALLOW BURIAL OF ROGERS, POST IN ARLINGTON

Offered by Senator McAdoo, friend of Rogers, the resolution would authorize the Secretary of War to allow burial at Arlington in event families of the airplane crash victims wished it.

The Senate concurred in a minor House amendment and sent to the White House the Thomas bill authorizing purchase by the Federal Government for $25,000 of the Post round-the-world plane, Winnie Mae, which would be placed in the Smithsonian Institution.

BELLUNO, Italy, Aug. 19.—The Rome section of the Association of Disabled Italian War Veterans dedicated a memorial chapel yesterday in the presence of disabled veterans of Austria and Germany.

Carlo Delcroix, president of the organization, who was blinded in the World War, told the Italians and foreigners present at the ceremony that "it is not true that war degrades and smirches humanity."

"Instead," he asserted, "it illumines and exalts. We all know ourselves to be better men because of it, even though our hands are stained with blood. Its violence leaves no rancor.

"Today, stretching our hands to our adversaries of yesterday, we feel no shadow is hanging over our souls which could have troubled the peace of our respective dead."

BODIES OF ROGERS AND POST ON WAY TO LOS ANGELES

Started for California by Plane Three Hours After Arrival in Seattle From Alaska.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 19.—After a stop of less than three hours, the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post left here at 11:53 a. m. in a Douglas air transport liner, piloted by William Winston, Texas flyer.

Pilot Joe Crosson had flown them to Seattle from Vancouver, B. C., in less than one hour today after bringing them from Point Barrow, Alaska.

A refueling stop was ordered for about 3 p. m. at Alameda, Cal., before proceeding to Los Angeles.

When Crosson arrived here with the bodies he taxied into a hangar, where three undertakers were waiting.

Civic representatives and others were at the municipal airport here when the bodies arrived. Among them were Col. Clarence Young, Pacific Coast manager of Pan-American Airways, and Amon Carter of Fort Worth, Tex., close friend of the Rogers family. Young and Carter will continue from Los Angeles to Oklahoma with the body of Post.

Arrival at Vancouver.

The Pan American Airways transport, piloted by Crosson, arrived in Vancouver unexpectedly last night after a 1500-mile flight from Point Barrow, most northerly American outpost, near where Post and Rogers fell to their deaths Thursday night while on a leisurely vacation trip. The ship was pushed quickly into a hangar and a provincial police guard posted.

Crosson, long a friend of Post and an admirer of Rogers, and his two assistants on the arduous journey were little inclined to discuss it or what they saw and experienced in the Northern Alaska wastelands. They were unable to add to the previous reports of the crash, which was witnessed only by an Eskimo, who ran 15 miles to Barrow to tell that the motor had misfired at an altitude of only 50 or 60 feet.

Few at Vancouver Airport.

Arrival of the plane at 6:11 p. m. found few persons at the Vancouver airport. It was not until the ship was over Squamish, 30 miles north of Vancouver, that Robert Gleason, radio operator aboard, signaled the plane would land.

"Please notify Vancouver authorities we are arriving. Thanks," was his message.

The flight from Fairbanks, with one stop at Whitehorse, Y. T., for refueling, was made in 10 hours and a few minutes. Crosson took over the land plane at Fairbanks after flying the bodies on the 500-mile trip from Point Barrow in a pontoon-equipped ship. Before leaving Fairbanks, Crosson said he intended to put down at Prince George, in Northern British Columbia, for the night. Favorable flying conditions, however, permitted him to make faster time than he

PARIS PARLEY ON ETHIOPIA BREAKS UP IN FAILURE

Mussolini Rejects French-British Proposal for Settlement, and Problem Is Sent Back to League of Nations.

GENEVA MEETING SET FOR SEPT. 4

Laval to Continue Efforts to Reach Compromise but There Is Little Hope That War in Africa Can Be Averted.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—A war for the Italian conquest of Ethiopia appeared inevitable today after the three-power conference threw the problem back into the hands of the League of Nations.

The immediate comment of a spokesman for the British delegation was that "nothing can be done at Geneva to prevent war."

Anthony Eden, Britain's representative, and Baron Pompeo Aloisi, representing Premier Mussolini's Government, packed up and prepared to leave following Italy's rejection of the French-British proposals, which would have limited Emperor Haile Selassie's control of his African empire.

Simultaneously Premier Laval of France announced his determination to seek a compromise in sounding out both Italy and England next week. The French fear that the League Council, when it meets on Sept. 4, will be powerless to find a solution to the dispute.

Baron Aloisi of Italy declared tonight:

"I see no basis for further discussion and I have no hopes for Geneva. . . . Italy does not want to leave Geneva, but if we are led to the door, we will have to leave."

The Italian diplomat said Italy had not even decided whether it would send representatives to Geneva Sept. 4 for the League of Nations session.

"Plenty of Men and Money."

Asked if the Italians expected a long war, Baron Aloisi said: "We have studied the question and we are perfectly assured. We have plenty of men and plenty of money * * * "Diplomatic channels have little chance to settle our affairs with Ethiopia."

As for the League covenant's clause safeguarding the independence and integrity of member nations Aloisi remarked: "The League engaged itself to do a lot of things it has not done."

The Italian diplomat said that the total disarmament of Ethiopia was the main demand of his nation.

"Our principal goal is security," he said. "To play our role in Europe, we must have security in our colonies if we are to maintain the Stresa front (of Italy, France and Great Britain).

Britain Blames Italy.

The British place the responsibility of the parley's failure at the door of Italy, explaining that Mussolini not only rejected the French-British plan, but also failed to offer a substitute.

The rejected proposals would have provided for French-British renunciation of further economic privileges in Ethiopia in favor of Italy; aided Italy by obtaining loans for developing its colonial possessions, and yielded to Italy political privileges in the appointment of technical advisers and department heads of customs.

Mussolini's answer, telephoned to Aloisi, was said by a spokesman close to the British delegation to have been accompanied by what amounted to a demand for complete political control of the Ethiopian empire.

Italy, the spokesman continued, "will go to Geneva Sept. 4 to defend its case," but neither France nor Britain expects the League to prevent war.

Aloisi and his delegation had "nothing to say," and rested on an insistence that it is up to others to change Mussolini's mind.

Britain at "Absolute Limit."

French observers suggested the possibility that Britain might call another conference before the League Council meets, but the British spokesman said, "We went to the absolute limit and the only thing left now is the League."

Laval, who supported the British, but who is nevertheless anxious to

BRITISH THINK ITALY INTENDS TO QUIT LEAGUE

Ethiopian Controversy Will 'Make or Break' Geneva Organization, Is Opinion in London.

SANCTIONS SAID TO MEAN WAR

Special Cabinet Meeting Called for This Week for Discussion of Position in Negotiations.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The British press commented darkly today on the possibility of war in East Africa and informed sources saw in Italy's action a challenge that the League of Nations may not survive.

The British are eager to hear from Anthony Eden, their Minister for League of Nations affairs, the possible consequences of Premier Mussolini's emphatic "no" to French-British suggestions for compromise.

But, more important, they hope to learn from him how far France will back Britain in the critical League of Nations Council session in Geneva, Sept. 4.

Britain is now convinced that Mussolini's blunt rejection of any economic concessions, in lieu of waging war in Ethiopia, foreshadows Italy's withdrawal from the League, unless the League sidesteps its obligations under the covenant. This Britain, and apparently France, is determined not to countenance.

"Make or Break" League.

With small member states voicing deep concern over the league's effectiveness in protecting lesser powers, such as Ethiopia, the prospect was viewed as inescapable that the Council session of Sept. 4 must either "make or break" the League.

Only stern measures to prevent an Italian invasion of Ethiopia can maintain the League's prestige, it was pointed out.

Such stern measures, it was felt in some quarters, must involve sanctions—and Sir Austen Chamberlain, former Foreign Secretary, has given voice to the widespread opinion that "sanctions mean war."

Prime Minister Baldwin, after receiving reports of the collapse of the three-Power negotiations, decided to cut short his holiday at Aix-Les-Baines and return tomorrow to England. It was thought a British Cabinet meeting would be held Thursday.

It is also reported that Parliament is likely to be convened early in September instead of on Oct. 29, as arranged, owing to the grave turn of affairs.

London's conservative morning newspapers expressed serious apprehension over the possible effects of the collapse of the Paris parleys.

"We are bound to reckon with the probability that this country may be involved willy nilly in another war more terrible than the last," commented the Morning Post.

The Times lashed out at Mussolini for his brusqueness in spurning the French-British proposals, saying: "Mussolini has shown little regard for the courtesies. The French Premier, who had to divert his attention from affairs of his own country at a critical moment, and the British Minister, especially appointed to deal with League of Nations affairs, had to kick their heels until Baron Pompeo Aloisi might be able to give them the views of the head of the Italian Government."

"After two days," the Times continued, "they found the Italian representative unable to make any serious contribution to the business in hand. The gravity of the Italian decision can hardly be overestimated. Italy has ignored her pledges and contemptuously flouted the League."

Stock Trade Sluggish.

The threat of war was also reflected in the sluggish movement of the British Stock Exchange, according to the Financial Times.

"If the Ethiopian business could be localized," said that paper, "nobody would be greatly perturbed from a financial viewpoint. But unfortunately other nations look as though they are being dragged into the theater of disagreement. It is apprehension like this, spreading still further, that holds cheerfulness in check."

The British Government has by implication made a bid for the moral support of the United States in its future steps in the Italian-Ethiopian situation, it was learned today. While Eden, in Paris, was seeing J. Theodore Marriner, counselor to the United States Embassy, the Foreign Office here advised Ray Atherton, American Charge d'Affaires here, of the trend of events.

Informed quarters said English-Italian "understanding" regarding British rights to Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile, had been knocked sky high by the tri-Power conference.

An authority said the response of Italy in Paris indicated that country considered itself no longer bound by the 1925 bilateral agreement with Great Britain or by other understandings of an informal character.

Authoritative sources said they were seriously worried by the complicated major question affecting the very life of the Sudan and Egypt.

PARIS CONFERENCE ON ETHIOPIAN ROW ENDS IN FAILURE

keep Mussolini's friendship to avoid danger to the League by the possible withdrawal of Italy, insisted that efforts to find a way out of the deadlock be continued "through diplomatic channels."

France saw in the British plan only the danger of wrecking the League through Italy's resignation, since Mussolini's apparent determination is either annexation or complete control of Ethiopia. That, neither Britain nor Ethiopia, both League members, will grant.

French observers saw their country's position at Geneva extremely precarious. Some predicted the League's collapse or weakening to the point of uselessness if Italy withdraws. In that event they saw France standing alone, faced with a renewed threat of an Austrian-German union.

Text of Communique.

"Pierre Laval, representing France; Anthony Eden, representing Great Britain, and Baron Aloisi, representing Italy, assembled in Paris to search for a means of peacably solving the Italo-Ethiopian difference.

"They have not yet been able to find a basis for discussion which would permit solution of the conflict.

"Difficulties encountered in examination of the suggestions made during the discussions necessitated adjournment of the study undertaken, which will be pursued through diplomatic channels."

Both Eden and Laval were to meet Aloisi today—Eden to lay before him the basis of a joint French-British action at the League Council, Aloisi merely to present his formal good-by.

"Crisis Like That of 1914."

Europe "faces a crisis like that of 1914," a high French official said privately today. The three-Power Stresa front—Great Britain, Italy and France—is broken, he admitted, and "France must resign herself to losing Italy's friendship."

Italy's apparent determination to conquer Ethiopia was said by one governmental authority to be a "test for the league. The league must triumph or there will be chaos."

He recalled that the "whole world went to war because Austria proposed to do to Serbia a good deal less than Mussolini intends doing to Ethiopia. The league may as well face the situation. It did nothing when Japan and Germany defied the league, but now it must stand or fall on the issue."

Italy's disregard for its league obligations, officials said, if continued, will mean "there is nothing to hold anyone."

France has constantly asserted heretofore that it needed Italy and would do nothing to alienate that nation, but today, after the collapse of the three-Power parley, officials said, "France is solidly with England."

The French arms embargo is recognized as more harmful to Ethiopia than to Italy, but the French said it was unlikely to be lifted until some action was taken at Geneva. Even the lifting of the embargo by Britain will not hurry the matter here.

The Italian-Ethiopian conciliations commission proposed to meet late today to resume work. Nicolas Socrate Politis, Greek diplomat, is the candidate mentioned as a fifth arbitrator, but the Italian spokesman said that nothing definite had been done about him. The commission, he added, might continue with only four members.

The Italian Position.

An Italian delegate refused to say that Mussolini stood flatly for annexation or complete political control of Ethiopia as the only acceptable ground, stating, however: "But all economic advantages would be absolutely worthless without proper police guarantees."

He gave little hope that Geneva would succeed where the three-Power conference had failed, stating: "The League of Nations must adapt itself to the march of civilization or perish. Italy will not accept that the covenant (of the League) be interpreted as a rigid instrument. It must be supple, for you cannot stop the march of history and the League must aid the march, not impede it."

Thet British indicated their stand at the Sept. 4 meeting would be based on Articles 10 and 20 of the League covenant, guaranteeing sovereignty and integrity of members of the League, and the voiding of any conflicting agreements among members made before the League covenant was signed.

The British, obviously annoyed at the Italian attitude, made public two documents from the Foreign Office's confidential files to contradict Italy's contention that Great Britain had agreed to divide Ethiopia with it.

One was a letter from Count Colli, Italian Minister to Addis Ababa, to the Ethiopian Emperor. Dated June 9, 1926, it referred to the English-Italian accord of 1925 as "an agreement between the Italian and British Governments defining the respective aspirations and mutual obligations of the two Governments with Ethiopia, establishing friendly co-operation between them with a view to attainment of their aims."

The letter added: "On behalf of my Government I have to inform your highness that the agreement referred to is purely of an economic character and is far from being designed to infringe upon the sovereign rights of the Ethiopian Government.

"It constitutes further proof of the friendly intentions of Italy and Great Britain toward the Ethiopian empire, which will remain entirely free to grant or refuse any requests in connection with the economic question which either of the two Governments may make."

Then followed a letter from Sir John Murray of the British Foreign Office to the League of Nations, on Aug. 3, 1926.

It said:

"There is nothing in the Anglo-Italian notes to suggest coercion or that pressure will be exercised on the Ethiopian Government. Sir Austin Chamberlain has stated in Parliament that the agreement certainly would not be used and could not be used for the purpose of coercing the Ethiopian Government."

WAR IMMINENT, IS OPINION IN ROME

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 19. — The moment when the Fascist military power will be directed against Emperor Haile Selassie's Ethiopian troops is not far distant, informed quarters said today.

This opinion gained adherents hourly as Italians read somewhat disdainfully of the suspension of the Paris negotiations of the three Powers.

The news of the parley's collapse came as no surprise to most Italians. Illustrative of the feeling that the conference was doomed was Premier Mussolini's departure from Rome for the week-end to exhort the troops in training in Southern Italy to prove their mettle in the country's "solemn hour."

The single hope for a diplomatic settlement of the East African controversy remains with the League of Nations Council, which meets Sept. 4. Informed circles, however, regard this as likely to present an even feebler obstacle to the Italian military plans than the three-Power parley.

Addressing the 28th of October division, Mussolini, even before it was public news that the Paris parley had failed, urged the troops to "forget diplomatic polemics."

"This hour," he told the Blackshirts, "is solemn for you and decisive for the nation. Discourse must be abolished. You have your orders in the name of your division. You will march over every obstacle until you have reached the goal which will be pointed out to you."

The Italian press echoed Mussolini's statement that the "nation will keep in its heart the great deeds the Blackshirt legions are about to accomplish in East Africa."

ORPHIR AGAIN SHIFTS SEARCH FOR LUSITANIA

By GILBERT McALLISTER.
(Copyright, 1935.)

ABOARD SALVAGE SHIP ORPHIR, Aug. 19.—Three Kinsale fishermen who witnessed the sinking of the Lusitania boarded the Orphir as we docked at the quay in Kinsale harbor last night and gave Capt Henry Russell information that altered our course when we resumed the search at dawn today.

The fishermen, Tim Oakley, James Hury and William Derby are convinced that the Lusitania lies seven miles off Sevenheads, Kinsale, in an area slightly westward of that we have fine-combed the last two days. All three of them took bearings from widely varying points as the torpedoed British liner sank.

The fruitlessness of our search in the 12-mile area, within which previous witnesses have insisted the great hulk lies, convinced Capt. Russell that the bearings taken by the three fishermen should alter our projected plan immediately.

"We know now that we have not sounded far enough westward of Ball's line given us last Thursday, but that we are close to the Lusitania," he said. "We must forsake completely the original 12-mile area."

As the Orphir left Kinsale harbor yesterday there was a strong wind blowing and a heavy sea running. When we rounded the old head of Kinsale we were pitching badly—fighting our way through troughs of enormous waves. The engines speed was 10 knots, but the best we were able to do in actual running time was less than four.

After hours of rough going in the newly charted area, during which the wind developed into hurricane force and breakers dashed over the forecastle, Capt. Russell determined that it was useless to make further efforts and headed the Orphir back to port.

ARCHDUKE OTTO COMMENTS ON PLANS FOR RESTORATION

Writes That Those Favoring International Agreement Are Foes of Austrian Independence.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Aug. 19.—Statesmen who regard the Hapsburg restoration as a question for international agreement were criticised yesterday by Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne.

In a letter to the Burgomeister of Eisgavn, Lower Austria, published in the monarchist newspaper "Der Oestrerreicher," Archduke Otto said those who would make restoration dependent on an international agreement really were trying "to reduce Austrian independence to the emptiness of a worthless slogan."

"But Austria's people are determined to live in freedom," the letter continued. "That is why more and more communities are in impressive manner proclaiming me the country's rightful ruler."

Towns and provinces which have issued orders against any further honorary citizenship for Archduke Otto meanwhile were adopting another method of showing their loyalty. Main streets are being named "Otto Hapsburg street."

Three times Starrett guided Gladys and Eva Smith to the capsized boat. Each time they lost their hold as waves tossed the boat. The last time they sank before Starrett could reach them.

Hopson Ordered Emotional Appeal in Utility Fight

igig," and he not only complained to the syndicate managers, but suggested to officers of Electric Bond and Share that they do likewise. No item was so insignificant as to be beneath Hopson's notice.

All Associated's advertising is handled by an agency named "Dr. Daniel Starch and staff." It developed that "Dr." Starch is Hopson's brother-in-law. This fact was wholly compatible with Hopson's established policy of keeping all the gravy on the family table.

Complaint to AP.

Not long after Associated restored its advertising to the Miami Herald, the utility lobby in Washington released a statement to the newspapers.

Hopson complained to the Herald that the Associated Press had not carried the statement, and the Herald "procured" it from Florida Power and Light Co. Vice-President Fred Burroughs of the Associated, also lodged a complaint with the New York office of the A. P.

Black showed by telegrams that Hopson directed his advertising managers in their advertising campaign against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, to "appeal to emotion, not reason."

"Tell them about the widows and orphans who will lose their investment if the bill passes," he wired from Miami to his New York office. This was in March, and the weather in New York and Washington was inclement, so Hopson elected to direct his campaign in behalf of the widows and orphans from the warm Southern sands.

95 Pct. Stock Drop Before Bill.

Pointing out that the value of Associated stock had declined more than 95 per cent before the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was introduced or even proposed, Senator Minton (Dem.), Indiana, asked:

"Did you have any emotion about the widows and orphans when you were selling them the stock?" "I admit," said Hopson, "that the bill was not the only factor which caused the stock to decline in value."

How Hopson was siphoning millions out of the system during the years Associated stock was falling from $75 to 25 cents a share was illustrated today by one example.

Example of Hopson's System.

During the years 1926 to 1933, inclusive, the Jones Operating & Finance Co., which had a service contract with Associated, took in a total of $2,725,000. That company is owned half by Edward J. Cheney and half in the names of Hopson's three sisters. Cheney manages the company, and there is a private agreement whereby Hopson and Cheney divide the profits.

Between 1920 and 1933, Cheney's share was $497,000 and Hopson's was $654,000, the difference being due to the fact that Hopson advanced the original capital. Hopson said "about half" of this company's business came from Associated.

Profits in Cheney's Name.

"In other words," Minton remarked, "at a time when you were an officer of Associated, you were making these huge profits through this private company which had a contract with Associated?"

"Certainly—what of it?"

"Is there anything in the books of Associated to show that you were associated with Cheney, in this company. "I don't know."

The company's profits were deposited in Cheney's name, but, under the private agreement, Hopson had the right to draw on it for any sum he chose, up to the full amount.

It was disclosed that the original capital advanced by Hopson was $5000.

"How did your sisters acquire these various properties?" Black asked. "By gift from me."

Another Contempt Threat.

At one stage, when Senator Schwellenbach interrupted Hopson in the course of a long explanation, the witness exclaimed: "This committee doesn't want the whole truth."

"You will have to withdraw that statement before we go on Black declared.

"It was another implied threat of contempt, but, in the prolonged colloquy which ensued, it was not clear whether Hopson had retracted or not.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Taxes on alcoholic beverages will put about $145,000,000 into State treasuries this year, a survey made for the American Legislators' Association shows.

The report includes actual or estimated revenues of $92,230,000 in 24 of the 32 states which license beer and liquor dispensaries, and $51,798,000 revenue in 10 of the 14 states operating liquor stores.

Wide variation in liquor taxes is shown among the states. New York State received $14,490,000 from excise and license taxes in 1934-1935, a per capita revenue of $3.20. California anticipated an annual revenue of $3,300,000, or 54 cents per capita.

ATTEMPTED JAIL BREAK BALKED AT SPRINGFIELD, MO.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 18. — An attempted break from the Greene County Jail, said to have been led by Floyd Maples, alleged member of the Leonard Short-Irish" O'Malley robbery gang, was thwarted by officers here yesterday after a hole had been sawed through an iron wall.

Maples was aided in the sawing, Sheriff Scott Curtis said, by Webster Brammer, 32, of Macon, Mo.

The hole, which had been cut with five hack-saw blades found in the prisoners' bathroom, was discovered on a tip from the inside. Fifteen prisoners were in the room where the sawing took place.

MEETING CALLED TO OPPOSE RIVER FRONT BOND ISSUE

PETITIONS AGAINST PLAN CIRCULATED

Organization Statement Says Memorial Proposal Is 'Indefinite, Incomplete and Impracticable.'

A meeting to form an organization of citizens opposing the $7,500,000 Jefferson National Expansion Memorial bond issue, to be voted on Sept. 10, has been called for 8 o'clock tonight at the Central Public Library, Thirteenth and Olive streets.

A temporary committee of which the chairman is Paul O. Peters of 1819 Thurman avenue, called the meeting and issued a statement outlining reasons for opposing the bond issue. Other members of the committee with Peters are Harry J. Paden, 4343 Lindell boulevard, and R. L. Simmerman, 1408 South Vandeventer avenue.

The organization is to be called the Citizens' Non-Partisan Committee, and Peters said today several thousand persons had enrolled as members by signing petitions which have been in circulation for the last week.

Committee Statement.

The committee's statement said, in part:

"We oppose the plan proposed as being indefinite, incomplete and impracticable. The voters of St. Louis are being asked blindly to indorse a bond issue which, according to the statement of Mayor Dickmann, is in support of a project which plainly has been, still is, and no doubt will remain even on the very day of the special election, incomplete and indefinite in its major essentials.

"The full text of the ordinance authorizing the election is vague and indefinite in its phraseology, promising only that the money, if authorized by the voters, will be used to defray one-fourth of the cost of a project which in the aggregate, with interest and carrying charges, amounts to $60,000,000 and will provide a river front memorial comprising not less than 1,000,000 square feet somewhere in St. Louis.

"May we ask who in these depression days wishes to purchase a share in a 'cat-in-the-bag' proposition, or who will be so reckless with public funds as to subscribe to any plans for a public memorial to Thomas Jefferson or anyone else at the rate of $60 per square foot?

The statement said the committee believed "this to be a plan for some of the holders and trustees and option holders to unload their practically worthless holdings, from an income producing standpoint, on to the public at fancy top prices, to the great detriment of many old and long established firms which have been doing business in the river-front territory for many years and have kept their property not only in constant use but in good repair."

"Extravagant and Useless."

"We oppose the bond issue also because it is an extravagant, useless and uncalled for expenditure of public funds which will be a mockery to the people of St. Louis when hundreds of our citizens are trying to eke out a miserable existence in wretched hovels and shacks on the river front from Baden to Carondelet. We hold it is the first duty of our nation, state and city to take care of the homeless and the destitute instead of erecting costly duplicate memorials to Thomas Jefferson or anyone else, living or dead.

"We oppose the Mayor's proposal from the labor angle inasmuch as no guarantees have been made that persons to be employed on the project will be paid a wage sufficient to maintain an American family, and we point out that prosperity can never return to America by any expenditures of public or any other funds for so-called subsistence wages, a scheme which removes the worker but one step from charity or the almshouse."

Federal Aid Counted On.

The proposed memorial would take in all of 37 city blocks and parts of three others between Eads Bridge and Poplar street and the river and Third street, including the block bounded by Third, Fourth, Chestnut and Market streets. It has been suggested that proceeds of the bond issue would be used to acquire the property, with the expectation that the Federal Government would provide funds for clearing the site and erecting memorial structures. The total cost has been estimated at $30,000,000.

Labor Organizations Listed as Indorsing River Front Memorial.

W. C. D'Arcy, chairman of the Campaign Committee for the bond issue, today gave to the press a list of several labor organizations which he said had adopted resolutions favoring the proposition.

In addition to the Central Trades and Labor Union, D'Arcy included in the list the following: Aircraft Workers' Federal Labor Union No. 18,293; Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association Local No. 2; Bindery Women's Union, Local No. 55; Cabinet Makers' and Machine Hands' Local Union No. 1596; Carpenters' District Council; Carpenters' Local Unions Nos. 47, 73, 417 and 185; International Association of Machinists Cutting Die Local No. 787; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union No. 2; Painters' District Council No. 2; Painters' Local Unions 46 and 137; Paperhangers' Local Union No. 341; Retail Clerks' Union No. 667; St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8; St. Louis Web Printing Pressmen's Union No. 38; Shirt and Play Suit Cutters' Local Union No. 165; Order of Railway Telegraphers, and Window Washers' Local No. 132.

Other organizations which D'Arcy said had indorsed the bond issue include the Building Owners' and Managers' Association, Council of Catholic Women, Kingshighway Park Improvement Association, Merchants' Exchange, St. Louis Hotel Men's Association and South Twelfth Street Improvement Association.

DROWNED IN POOL

ROBERT BRANDES.

BOY SUCKED INTO DRAIN AT POOL AND DROWNED

Robert Brandes, 16, Loses Life While Swimming With Friend at Fairground Park.

Robert Brandes, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brandes, 4114 Clay avenue, was drowned in the Fairground Park swimming pool yesterday afternoon when he was drawn into the opening of a drain pipe by the flow of water as the pool was being drained.

Police reported the heavy iron grating, four feet square, used to cover the drain opening, which has a diameter of two feet, had been removed and was found on the bottom of the pool near by.

Walter Oppeau, 16, 4150 Carter avenue, who had gone to the pool with Brandes, said they were swimming in the center, where the water was 11 feet deep, when his companion disappeared.

Lifeguards Andrew Aylward Jr. and Robert Reed, called from the tower in the center of the pool, found Brandes in a sitting position, his legs in the drain. The pressure of the water flow was so strong they could not remove him.

Advised of the situation, Wilbur Wehmeyer, supervisor of life guards, ordered the drain closed at a cut-off and joined in the effort to bring Brandes to the surface, which was not difficult, once the flow of water was stopped. An inhalator kept at the pool and another brought by firemen were used for an hour and a half.

The boy's father, a city fireman, was called and assisted in efforts at resuscitation.

TIFF STRIKERS INVITE PROPOSAL FROM OPERATORS

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

POTOSI, Mo., Aug. 19.—A settlement committee of striking Washington County tiff miners, at a two-hour conference today with W. F. White, Federal conciliator, asked him to obtain a proposal from employing firms for settlement of the strike, two weeks old today.

White said later that he had arranged for consultations with some of the operators, and that it was his hope to bring the employers and the strikers together in conference.

The settlement committee represents the first union composed exclusively of tiff miners and tiff haulers ever organized in this area.

Establishment of the union, which is in process of formal organization, was authorized yesterday at a mass meeting of miners from all over the county, held on a hillside near Old Mines, nine miles north of here.

Next Move Up to Firms.

The mass meeting decided that the next move was up to the operators, the National Pigments & Chemical Co. being chief among the employing concerns. The miners, who are demanding an increase from $3.50 to $5.50 a ton for tiff they dig on the company's property, listened with apparent approval when their settlement committee reported an unofficial suggestion that the company might be willing to grant an increase to $5, and recognize the new union by signing a year's contract. No official proposal has come from the operators. Before the strike began Aug. 5, they offered a compromise rate of $4.50.

While the miners were ready to give careful consideration to any proposal from the operators, it was made clear that tentative proposals of Conciliator White, representing the Department of Labor, would not be considered unless indorsed officially by the operators.

Conference in Rectory.

The conference between White and the committee was held at the rectory of the Catholic parish at Old Mines. White had conferred with the committee last week, when it represented miners elected from the rank and file of three organizations in the field, the American Workers' Union, the National Barytes Producers' Association, and the Workman's Benefit Association.

Action of the miners in consolidating into one union represented a practical step preparatory to conducting peace negotiations, the men recognizing that the company cannot be expected to deal with three organizations at once.

The three organizations are not dissolved, but the miners and haulers among their membership are members of the new organization, which has invited the mill workers to join.

In the meantime, picket lines still are rigidly maintained. So implicitly do pickets obey instructions to let no one though without passes from strike headquarters that some strike leaders, known to all the pickets, were halted last night.

Speakers at Meeting.

One of the mass meeting speakers, W. C. Meyer, from the St. Louis headquarters of the American Workers' Union, summarized the situation, saying to the 2000 miners:

"Until a contract is signed the war is still on. The more you prepare for a long war the quicker it will be over. It cannot be over until the company submits a proposal."

The principal address was made by the Rev. John F. Walsh, pastor at Old Mines, most of whose parishioners are strikers and who has been active in attempting to further a settlement. Urging the miners to cast aside internal antagonisms which have developed, Father Walsh asserted he proposed to aid in bringing about a peaceable, favorable settlement for the miners.

"History is in the making in Washington County today," declared the priest, speaking from a truck, "not only for the present but for generations to come. For God's sake, act with one heart, one mind, rise above petty things, bow to the will of the majority."

Father Walsh warned the miners that he had been advised indirectly by Gov. Park that unless a fair settlement is effected soon, other steps will be taken. He alluded to the fact that the militia has not been sent to this area.

But one vote was cast against immediate organization of a new union. That was registered by Bert McMullen, vice-president of the National Barytes Producers' Association, who acted as chairman of the meeting. He expressed himself as satisfied to abide by the will of the majority.

Henry Maggos Hit With Revolvers When He Resists Three; Locked in Washroom.

Henry Maggos, one of the proprietors of Lindbergh Park, an amusement resort northeast of Alton, was robbed of $670 at the park at 8 a. m. today by three armed men who beat him with their revolvers when he resisted.

Maggos was in his office counting the week-end receipts when the men entered and demanded the money. Maggos started to grab the revolver from the hand of one of the men, whereupon the three struck him with the butts of their revolvers and took the money. They locked him in a washroom and escaped. After they had gone, Maggos broke a window and attracted the attention of a park employe, who freed him.

MISSING MAN FOUND BY DEPUTY, SHOOTS HIMSELF

Ernest Hohengarten, Yeast Salesman, Fires Bullet in Chest When Questioned on County Road.

Ernest Hohengarten, a yeast salesman who had been missing since Friday, shot himself in the chest with a small pistol concealed in his hand as Deputy Sheriff Tony Fassler was questioning him on Meramec Bottom road, a mile and a half west of Highway 61, at 7:15 o'clock this morning. At St. Louis County Hospital it was stated the bullet passed through Hohengarten's body and his condition was serious.

Hohengarten, employed by Standard Brands, Inc., 4141 Forest Park avenue, left that establishment early Friday in a small delivery truck owned by the company. This morning a farmer informed Arthur Jennemann, storekeeper at Mattese, that the yeast truck was parked on the Meramec Bottom road. Deputy Fassler was notified. Jennemann drove to the scene ahead of the officer, parking some distance from the truck.

Lying Inside When Found.

When Fassler arrived he and Jennemann went to the truck and found Hohengarten lying inside. In reply to a question, Hohengarten, who appeared dazed, said his gasoline supply was exhausted. He rose to a sitting position and Fassler started to put handcuffs on him. With a sudden movement he placed his right hand against his chest and fired a shot.

"What did you want to do that for?" Fassler asked as he wrenched the pistol from Hohengarten's grasp.

"I have been wanting to do this for several days," was the reply.

Fassler took the wounded man to an undertaking establishment on Lemay Ferry road, where he was transferred to an ambulance and hurried to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition.

Notes Found in Pockets.

Notes found in Hohengarten's pockets were addressed to his superior, R. M. Leist, his wife and his brother, Carl. The note to Leist read: '"This will clear up the situation clearly and thoroughly. The money I have coming will take care of any difficulty. You have been a square shooter, and I both admire and respect you. Tubby."

To his brother Hohengarten wrote: "I can't go on, take care of mother and dad."

The note to his wife, containing endearing terms, explained that "I can not go any farther, after the first shock wears off you will see it was the best way. Tell the boys I will always be at their side pulling for them." The message added that "insurance will give you more than I was ever able to."

Hohengarten, 42 years old, resided with his wife and two sons, Frank, 16, and Robert, 11, at 4257 Penrose street. He had worked for Standard Brands, Inc., for 12 years and had a good record, company officers stated.

BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY PLAYMATES NEAR ALTON

Jack Riehl Suffers Bullet Wound in Abdomen When Rifle Is Discharged.

Jack Riehl, 13-year-old son of Mrs. Caroline Riehl, 3808 DeTonty street, was seriously wounded Saturday afternoon when he was accidentally shot in the abdomen by a playmate when on an outing eight miles north of Alton.

Young Riehl was fishing in a creek, while William McKee and Hugh Horstman, both 13, his playmates, who live near Alton, were practicing target shooting with a .22-caliber rifle about 30 feet away. As McKee handed the rifle to Horstman, it was discharged and the bullet struck Riehl. The other two boys carried him to the highway, where they hailed a passing motorist, who took him to St. Joseph's Hospital in Alton.

MARLBOROUGH APARTMENTS SOLD UNDER FORECLOSURE

The 62-family Marlborough apartments building at 5696 Kingsbury avenue was sold for $176,500 under forclosure today to the trustees of the First National Co. The trustees, the First National Bank and former Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, were the only bidders.

The original mortgage, executed in 1929 by Louis G. Penningrota, was for $185,000, of which $172,250 was held by the First National Co., former investment affiliate of the bank, as part of the security behind its so-called "guaranteed first mortgage participations." The company sold $9,577,000 of the participations to the public and then permitted them to go into default in 1933. The apartment building was valued at $309,600 at the time of the loan in 1929.

FATALLY BEATEN

MISS VALDA HEBERLIE.

Says Draft Dodger Was Only One of Many Who Sought to Evade Service.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Louis S. Waldman, holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery and gallantry under fire, asked President Roosevelt in a letter yesterday to grant an "unconditional pardon" to Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft dodger.

Waldman argued that Bergdoll, now resident in Germany awaiting the result of his German wife's appeal to the President, was only one of many wealthy American youths who sought to evade service.

Waldman, recited the "ignominy" he said he suffered when he was refused a commission at the Plattsburg officers' training camp early in the war because of his Austrian origin.

"The humiliation and the ignominy I suffered when I was virtually accused of being a traitor entitles me to appeal to you and ask that you . . . grant an unconditional pardon to Bergdoll. I am sure Bergdoll has been sufficiently punished. Let us be human in this matter."

Waldman, denied a commission, enlisted and became a Sergeant. The medal was awarded recently for "distinguished demonstrations of bravery."

GIRL BEATEN AND LEFT AT ROADSIDE DIES

Miss Valda Heberlie, 17 years old, who was found Thursday unconscious and with a fractured skull in a roadside ditch near her home at Coffmann, Mo., died yesterday at Barnes Hospital.

Sheriff Henry J. Drury of Ste. Genevieve County has expressed the theory that the girl's injuries, compound depressed fractures of both sides and front of the head, were the result of an attack. Two rocks, stained with blood and on which were strands of hair similar in color to the girl's, were found near the place where she was lying.

Sheriff Drury, after an inquiry, questioned a young man who had been forcing his attentions on her and had exhibited jealously in remarks made. Drury also said, however, the attack may have been made by a demented person. The State Highway Patrol is aiding the Sheriff in his investigation of her death.

At first it was thought a truck driver with whom the girl was seen riding Thursday night might have been connected with the assault, but the Sheriff said he learned the driver let the girl off the truck near her home. The man was an acquaintance of the girl, who had encountered her in Ste. Genevieve, where she had gone to have a tooth pulled, and had driven her home at her request.

After being found, Miss Heberlie was taken to Bonne Terre for emergency treatment and then to Barnes Hospital. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett H. Heberlie. Her sisters, Beatrice and Monica Heberlie, reside at 5878A Delmar boulevard.

SUBSTITUTE FARM MORTGAGE BILL PASSED IN SENATE

New Frazier-Lemke Measure Sent to House Without Roll Call—Rail Pension Also Approved.

COMPROMISE LIKELY ON UTILITIES, TAX

Roosevelt Told House Won't Accept Holding Company Abolition—Income Rates Revised.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Senate passed today the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill without a roll call. It now goes to the House.

The bill, designed to meet the situation resulting from the Supreme Court's invalidation of the farm mortgage moratorium act, gives a farmer access to the bankruptcy actions in such manner that he can retain the property by paying a "reasonable rental."

It would give courts power to fix the rents which would be used to meet tax and insurance obligations. At any time up to three years the farmer could reacquire the holding by paying its appraised value. Creditors dissatisfied with the appraisal could demand an auction sale.

Senator Bailey (Dem.), North Carolina, said in debate the bill "puts the farmer where he will find it difficult to get credit."

Despite denials from Senators Borah (Rep.), Idaho, and Frazier (Rep.), North Dakota, he clung to his assertion that the property-appraisal provisions would make potential creditors reluctant to lend.

Senator Borah agreed it would alter contracts, but said that was inevitable in any bankruptcy legislation and the Supreme Court had so recognized. He said that feature of the legislation did not make it unconstitutional. Borah contended also that the three-year delay might work to the advantage of the creditor, rather than to his disadvantage.

Rail Pension Bill Passed.

Both Houses today passed the Wagner-Crossen bill designed to replace the Railroad Pension Act declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The House acted early in the afternoon and the Senate passed the bill a short time later.

A companion tax bill is pending.

This tax bill was attacked before the House Ways and Means Committee today as unconstitutional by C. A. Miller, general counsel for the American Short Line Railway Association. The bill would place a two per cent tax on employe incomes and a 4 per cent excise tax on employes, based on payrolls, with individual wages above $300 a month exempt from both taxes.

Compromise on Others.

After a conference with President Roosevelt, Democratic leaders in Congress today sought to obtain action on all or most of 11 pieces of legislation, including compromises on the $250,000,000 tax bill and the utilities measure, and then adjourn by Saturday night.

Although the program was considered subject to change as eleventh-hour situations developed, authoritative sources stressed these measures as those on which action will be sought especially:

Utilities, tax, coal stabilization, bar against gold suits, alcohol control, Tennessee Valley amendments, NRA labor standards on firms with Government contracts, rivers and harbors legislation, third deficiency bill, oil regulation to ratify state compacts, and railroad reorganization.

End This Week Seen.

After the conference, in which the leaders sat with the President until late last night, Senator Robinson, Senate majority leader, declared he believed "the work of the session will be completed this week."

It was said that during the conference, the President expressed strong feeling in favor of the utility bill clause calling for mandatory abolition of "unnecessary" holding companies by 1942. This is the provision which was passed by the Senate and rejected by the House and which has led to a long deadlock in Senate-House conference.

Congressional leaders, it was said, informed the President that it would be impossible to get this provision through Congress. Whereupon it was decided that Senator Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, would seek today to get the conferees to agree on a compromise and, failing that, Representative Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, would offer a motion in the House to instruct that chamber's conferees to accept the compromise.

The compromise, though not fully outlined, was said to direct the Federal Power Commission to decide which companies should be eliminated, but would leave wide avenues through which the companies could carry to the courts their fight against dissolution.

Tax Compromise Points.

As for the tax measure, a compromise on several points also was indicated. For instance, the Senate voted to increase surtaxes on individual incomes over $1,000,000; the House made its boosts start at incomes over $50,000. The President, it was said, indicated that he favored a $200,000 figure. He also was declared to favor some kind of inheritance tax. The House voted new, high levies on inheritances. The Senate favored, instead, increases in the present estate tax.

A compromise on graduated taxes on corporation incomes also was under discussion. The House, turning down the administration recommendation for a widely graduated tax in accordance with the size of income, voted merely for a 1 per cent graduation, ranging from 13¼ to 14¼ per cent. The Senate passed a 3 per cent range, from 12½ to 15½. Legislative leaders now talk of a compromise of 2 per cent.

The Borah amendment to apply income taxes to future issues of Government securities and the McCarran amendment designed to restore a free market for silver were said to be slated for elimination, if plans of Democratic leaders carry through.

Richetti Denied New Trial.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 19.—Adam Richetti, convicted of the Union Station killings June 17, 1933, and pal of the late Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, was denied a new trial by Circuit Judge Ray G. Cowan today. Judge Cowan set Oct. 4 as the date for his execution although this appeared to be only a formality in view of the time necessary for Richetti's appeal to higher courts.

OLD HITTITE CAPITAL FOUND IN NORTH SYRIA

American Archeologists, Uncover Palace Dating Back to 850 B. C., Near Antioch.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Discovery of an ancient Hittite "provincial" capital in North Syria, not far from Antioch, was announced by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago today.

Dr. C. W. McEwan, field director of Syrian expeditions, reported the find. He said the town seemed to have been of considerable local importance between 1000 and 500 B. C.

The city, extent as yet undetermined, lies to the north of Antioch, once a center of Greek culture with 400,000 inhabitants, between Alexandretta and Aleppo. The initial discovery was made by a native foreman at the edge of a mound known as Tell Tainat.

Signs of Other Buildings.

Test diggings disclosed a royal palace, Dr. McEwan said, with indications that there were other public buildings. An outstanding piece of statuary recovered was a column base with two crouching lions. Institute archeologists said it was the first of its kind to be found.

Dr. McEwan told of events leading to the excavations:

"The native foreman of our expedition on nearby mounds was riding into Antioch on a bicycle one day when he noticed two carefully cut blocks of basalt in the ditch. We found that they were column bases of a royal building of the late Hittite period, some time after 1000 B. C.

"Natives of the surrounding villages had been digging at the mound, not for antiquities, but for ancient burnt bricks to help them in road buildings.

"A two weeks dig at Tell Tainat in co-operation with the Department of Antiquities of Syria (which is a French mandate) uncovered a 'Hilani,' or Syrian-Hittite palace, which showed three construction periods between 850 and 600 B. C."

Mixture of Cultures.

Dr. McEwan explained that the Syrian-Hittite culture was a composite of Hittite, Phoenician and Assyrian cultures which flourished in North Syria from 1100 B. C. until the conquest of Alexander the Great.

"The discovery of the local capital of these people will bring new light upon a most interesting historical period," he said.

400 WASHINGTON U. STUDENTS TO RECEIVE FEDERAL FUNDS

Allotments by National Youth Administration for Fall Semester Approved.

About 400 Washington University students will receive financial aid from the National Youth Administration, beginning with the opening of the fall semester Sept. 23, Chancellor George R. Throop announced today. Allotment of the funds to the university was approved Saturday by Clark Buckner, administrator of the program in Missouri.

More than 250 applications for the part-time jobs have been received. Qualifications and regulations governing the work are similar to those of the Federal program last year, when 355 students received $15 a month for 33 hours of work. The students assisted in research in several departments, classified books in the library, directed recreational and settlement work off the campus and engaged in several social work surveys.

5000 AT LONG ISLAND RALLY SWEAR ALLEGIANCE TO HITLER

Sheriff Tears Off Nazi Emblem, If It Alone Is Carried on Autos.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Five thousand German-Americans gathered at Camp Siegfried, near Yaphank, Long Island, yesterday to renew their allegiance to the political and economic creed of Nazi Germany and to participate in the camp's annual summer festival.

Deputy Sheriff James A. Coomes stopped all automobiles carrying only Nazi swastika emblems and tore them off.

"If they won't carry the American flag, they can't fly the swastika," Coomes said.

In the massing of the colors, after speechmaking and heel-clicking, the American flag was carried together with the German flag and the swastika banner.

The camp is owned by the League of Friends of New Germany. Joseph Schuster, acting national leader of the Friends, called on the group to adhere to the ideas of Hitlerism so that America might be improved in the future. His address was greeted with "heils."

Zionist Election Charges Dropped.

By the Associated Press.

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 19.—(Palcor Agency)—Allegations of irregularity in the American elections for delegates to the World Zionist Congress were rejected today by the court of honor of the congress. It decided the protest registered by the Jewish state party was untenable. The court, however, canceled a small number of votes from Chicago. This will not, however, affect the total of the election returns from America.

500 GLASS WORKERS STRIKE IN E. ST. LOUIS

Plant of Obear-Nester Co. Shut Down After Rise in Pay Is Denied.

The Obear-Nester Glass Co., plant, 2000 East Broadway, East St. Louis, was shut down this morning by a strike of employes called when an increase in pay demanded for laborers was refused by the management.

All of the company's 425 laborers, members of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, quit work. Seventy-five others, belonging to other glass workers' unions, walked out in sympathy.

The wage demand was for a 10 per cent increase for women workers, who are paid 32½ cents an hour and a similar increase for men paid 42½ cents an hour. The working schedule is a five-day, 40-hour week. Lighter work for the women also was asked for.

Gish Johnson, business agent of the laborers, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that women did practically the same work as men, and although the agreement with the company provided for time and a half for overtime, employes got time off for extra work instead of being paid time and a half.

J. K. Nester, president of the company, told a reporter the wage increase was refused "because the glass industry will not stand an increase in operating costs, as there is a decline in the selling price of bottles. Costs now are as much as we can stand. We are paying more than the NRA scale provided and there will not be any changes in the scale."

About 150 pickets were grouped today around the entrance to the plant property, inclosed by a high wire fence. They refused to allow any workmen to go into the grounds but did not try to interfere with clerical workers and superintendents. Fire in glass furnaces will be kept going by the superintendents.

Among those kept from entering were building laborers, employed on construction of a $235,000 addition to the plant. Their business agent announced they, too, would refuse to work until the strike was settled.

Unions which went out in sympathy were the American Flint Glass Workers' and Mould Makers' Union, the machine operators of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, and machinists employed at the plant.

The Obear-Nester Co., manufactures bottles exclusively and has had a large increase in business since the repeal of prohibition.

JUDGE ASSAILS GOV. LAFFOON IN CHARGING GRAND JURY

Alleges Troops Were Sent to Harlan County, Ky., "for Political Purposes."

By the Associated Press.

HARLAN, Ky., Aug. 19.—Judge James M. Gilbert, in charging the Harlan County grand jury today to investigate occupation of Harlan by 700 national guardsmen primary election day, charged the troops were sent "for political purposes."

References to a "reign of terror" in Harlan, Judge Gilbert told the one Negro and 11 white jurors, were wholly untrue and groundless and "were put in the executive order (for the occupation, issued by Gov. Laffoon) not in good faith but to prejudice the people against you." "No man," the Court continued, "whether it be the Governor or the Constable, can say that I have not put as much energy into law enforcement as anyone has."

Judge Gilbert said he understood Adjutant-General Henry H. Denhardt, who commanded the soldiers, has been summoned to the grand jury. He directed that when the General appears the jurors were to "give him the right-of-way and let him tell everything he knows."

"I want you to find out," he said elsewhere, "who was responsible for this invasion."

J. T. MUENCH WOULD CHANGE IMMIGRATION REGULATIONS

Urges That Alien Students Now in Country Be Included in Quotas Without Returning Home.

Former City Counselor Julius T. Muench hade an appeal for the passage of the Kerr bill, now pending in Congress, which would make certain changes in the immigration laws, in a speech during the Community Forum period over radio station KSD yesterday.

The chief feature of the Kerr bill, he said, is that it would allow alien students and visitors now in this country to change their status to quota immigrants, if they desired to remain in this country, and relieve them of the necessity of returning to their home country and applying for a new re-entry under present classifications.

Muench cited the cases of four St. Louisans, three of them heads of a family, who will have to be deported and apply for re-entry to this country, unless the Kerr bill is passed. He said there were 2600 of such cases in the country of persons now here who, he said, would make desirable citizens, but all of whom face deportation.

Accused of Violating Closing Law.

Mike Puricelli, part owner of a saloon at 6786 Manchester avenue, and nine other men were arrested yesterday in a building at 6780 Manchester, where, police said, they found iced beer and liquor. Police said Puricelli had no license to operate a saloon at 6780 Manchester. He and the others were booked as suspected of violating the Sunday closing law. All denied owning the beer and liquor.

Nathan Rudman, a grocer at 2901 Lawton boulevard, was arrested yesterday following a sale of bacon to a Negro in defiance of the ordinance against selling groceries on Sunday. He was also charged with resisting an officer in that he hurled a slab of bacon at Patrolman Burke, according to the latter, when Burke attempted to place him under arrest.

Pickets and Police in Strike Clash.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 19.—A clash between several hundred pickets and a police guard of 70 occurred today when the Strutwear Knitting Co. factory, closed last Friday by a labor disturbance, reopened today. A policeman fired into the air, routing the pickets temporarily, but clubs and fists flew briefly. One employe, escorting a group of girls into the plant, was reported struck on the head by a rock. V. R. Dunn, one of the leaders of last year's riotous truck strike, was taken into custody. The union is demanding recognition and reinstatement of eight workers.

BORAH HOLDING LEAD IN PRESIDENTIAL POLL

Col. Knox Second—G. O. P. to Establish Western Headquarters Soon.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — Announcement of greater Republican efforts to win the West in 1936 coincided today with word that Senator Borah of Idaho still leads the Lucas poll for presidential nomination. Next were two Midwesterners, Col. Frank Knox, Illinois, and Gov. Landon of Kansas.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the national committee disclosed it soon will establish joint headquarters in Chicago with the Midwest Republican conference, the agency that promoted the June "grassroots" gathering at Springfield, Ill. He failed to disclose details of what he termed "a program of intensified and co-ordinated Republican activity in the Western states," which he said had been worked out.

Robert H. Lucas, director for the national committee in the Hoover administration, tabulated the standings of his poll of 2600 county G. O. P. chairmen and others as follows:

	Aug. 12.	Today.
Borah	247	313
Knox	167	218
Landon	127	152
Frank O. Lowden, Illinois	88	114
Senator Vandenberg, Michigan	97	111
Herbert Hoover	52	68
Ogden Mills, New York	40	54
Theodore Roosevelt, N.Y.	41	53
Representative Fish, N.Y.	38	46
Senator Dickinson, Ia.	28	33
Representative Wadsworth, New York	17	17

There was a scattering of support for others unnamed in the Lucas statement, amounting now to 107 votes. He said sentiment of 1286 counties was now represented. Gains made by Borah were 66, by Knox 51 and by Landon 25 since the first tabulation was made public.

In charge of the new office in Chicago will be Harrison E. Spangler, John Hamilton and George A. Ball, national committeemen for Iowa, Kansas and Indiana respectively. Until headquarters are further expanded the organization will also serve the Pacific states.

SOVIET POLAR EXPEDITION FORCED TO ALTER COURSE

Gives Up Search for Legendary Islands After Flight Over Region of Ice.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—Baffled by ice and fog, the Ushakoff expedition was forced to suspend exploration of the mysterious blank area in the polar seas. It headed for Franz Joseph Land, a radio message from the Soviet ship Sadko said today. Before giving up the search for the legendary Gillis Land, in the zone where some unknown force is said to turn vessels off their course, George Ushakoff, head of the Sadko expedition, flew with Pilot Babushkin for two and one-half hours over the region, penetrating to 82 degrees north latitude.

A thick ice pack compelled the Sadko to change her course from a direct easterly direction to southeasterly. Ushakoff's radiogram said: "On the night of Aug. 13 we put one of our planes overboard and Babushkin and I took off for an exploration flight northward. We were in the air for two and a half hours and reached 82 degrees latitude.

"A heavy fog made visibility very poor. Several times we were compelled to fly so low we literally skimmed the ice. The wings of the plane became covered with ice, obliging us to return to the boat. We then decided to steer along our main course eastward to Franz Joseph Land."

520 HOMESTEADS COMPLETED ON 11 FEDERAL PROJECTS

Resettlement Administrator Said to Have Finished Half of Work It Took Over.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Resettlement Administration announced today 520 homesteads have been completed on 11 projects taken over from the Interior Department.

Completion of the 11 projects at a cost of $1,810,654 was said to have marked the finish of half of the projects started by the subsistence homesteads division of the Interior Department. Streets, roads, water and sewage disposal, barns and outbuildings have been provided on small tracts.

On the nearly 2400 acres, the administration said, there are 75 three-room house, 277 four-room houses, 161 with five rooms and seven with six rooms.

HELD FOR EXTORTION NOTES

Apartment Employe Accused of Threatening Actress.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—An apartment house superintendent is under arrest in connection with extortion notes allegedly sent to Thelma Todd, motion picture actress, threatening her life unless she paid from $10,000 to $20,000.

The arrest was made Saturday by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The suspect was booked as Harry Schimanski, 34 years old. The extortion notes, agents said, were sent from Feb. 2 to Aug. 12 of this year. Similiar notes, they said, were sent to Abe Lyman, orchestra leader, also threatening Miss Todd's life.

GOV. PARK LIKELY TO NAME SUPREME JUDGE TOMORROW

Refuses to Say Who Successor to Walter D. Coles, St. Louis, Will Be.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 19.—A successor to Judge Walter D. Coles of St. Louis, who recently resigned as a member of the State Supreme Court, effective Sept. 1, probably will be named tomorrow, Gov. Park announced today.

While the Governor would not say who the appointee would be, reports persisted in political circles here that J. C. Collet, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, would be named.

Collet, who is 37 years old, has headed the utility-regulating body for more than two years. He is a Democrat from Salisbury.

WOMAN AND MAN DROWNED

Former Steps Into Deep Water in Canal Near Cape Girardeau.

By the Associated Press.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Frank Rayburn, 29 years old, and her brother-in-law, Martin H. Schwab, 24, were drowned in a drainage canal near here late yesterday.

Witnesses said Mrs. Rayburn stepped from a shoal into 30 feet of water and went down. Schwab apparently was seized by cramps when he and Mrs. Rayburn's husband went into the water after her. Rayburn was rescued by other members of their party.

EX-HANGMAN HELD IN MURDER PREFERS BULLETS TO GALLOWS

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Aug. 19.—Alois Fuerst, former Village Burgomaster who once worked for the Austrian Government as a hangman, is under arrest accused of killing two 5-year-old children, one of them his daughter, and then setting fire to his barn with the alleged double motive of concealing the crime and collecting fire insurance. His wife also was arrested.

Police quoted Fuerst as saying: "If I have to die I want to be shot. I know what hanging is."

No Trustee for Carveth Wells.

By the Associated Press.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 19.—Bankruptcy Referee John Keogh ruled today that Grant Carveth Wells, the explorer-lecturer, had no attachable assets and that therefore no trustee could be designated for his estate. Wells, who sailed for Mexico Saturday with his wife and daughter, filed a petition in bankruptcy last spring after his first wife, Luard T. Wells, got an award of $5000 in her alienation of affections suit against the present Mrs. Wells. Wells then listed liabilities of $11,350 and assets of $4.50.

Two Awarded College Scholarships.

FERRIS ON WAY TO PRISON FOR KILLING OF DICKINSON

Life Term at Hard Labor for Murder at Detroit of Justice Hughes' Nephew.

By the Associated Press.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 19.—William Lee Ferris was en route here today to begin serving a life term at hard labor in the State's northern branch prison for the holdup murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney.

The 26-year-old prisoner will be dressed in in less than two months after he and his three beer garden dancer accomplices killed Dickinson in Rouge Park in Detroit in a robbery in which they got $134.

Ferris, dishevelled and in shirt sleeves, was shackled to a convicted Negro burglar in Detroit last night for the long train trip. He refused to talk to his wife, Violet, who took their baby, born since his arrest, June 30, to see him.

Jean Miller and Florence and Loretta Jackson already are serving life sentences in the Detroit House of Correction for their part in the murder of Dickinson, who was a nephew of Chief Justice Charless Evans Hughes.

Hearing for Girl Killer's Wife.

DETROIT, Aug. 19.—Presiding Judge Arthur E. Gordon of Recorder's Court ordered today that Mrs. Florence Harding Goodrich, wife of Merton Ward Goodrich, be examined on a charge of first degree murder. The examination was set tentatively for Sept. 7. Mrs. Goodrich was charged originally with being an accessory after the murder of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher by Goodrich Sept. 20. Goodrich is serving a life term.

COLLECTION OF RARE STAMPS ON DISPLAY

50,000 Shown in Advance of Thursday's Convention of Philatelists.

There are about 50,000 stamps in the exhibition opened today at the Melbourne Hotel in connection with the forty-first annual convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans which opens there Thursday. St. Louis stamp collectors said it was the best and most valuable stamp exhibit ever made in St. Louis.

The exhibit is headed by a special frame sent by the Postoffice which contains every stamp issued by the United States since the Bureau of Engraving began printing stamps in 1894. Before that the Government had stamps printed on contract by private firms.

This frame is worth about $20,000, according to J. Edward Vining, president of the Mound City Stamp Club and chairman of the convention committee. The first stamps in it are some newspaper and periodical stamps, all bearing pictures of fat, heavily dressed ladies representing Justice, Freedom, Liberty, etc., which were issued in 1894.

The last issued was the one commemorating the San Diego Fair this year. There is the NRA stamp—with the business man out of step with the laborer and Uncle Sam and bearing the legend: "In a Common Determination." Also there are copies of the National Park issue of last year over which Postmaster Farley had so much trouble with collectors.

The greatest oddity in the exhibit—acknowledged to be of little value except as a curiosity—is a group of frames shown by Dr. Lister Tuholske of St. Louis. He attempted to get postcards which had on them the same picture as that on a stamp, and have the postcard bearing that stamp sent from the place which has the closest connection with the picture. There is, for instance, a postcard with a picture of Washington bearing the 2-cent Washington stamp, and sent from Washington. There is also the Italian stamp with the statue of Romulus and Remus being nursed by the wolf attached to a postcard bearing the same picture.

But in some cases the plan didn't work out well. An Australian stamp carrying the finely etched head of King George was sent on a postcard carrying the picture of a native dancing girl in a grass skirt and mask.

The most valuable exhibit in the show, Vining says, is a group of 10 frames of early Dutch stamps, very rare, and many of them in special blocks which add to their value. Vining said the group was worth $7500. He thinks the entire display would bring about $1,000,000 at an auction sale, if there were collectors with money enough to buy them all.

There are a lot of stamps which carried letterson air mail flights—the latest wrinkle in stamp collecting. If the letters bear the autograph of the pilot, they are immediately more valuable. If the plane crashed, they are worth still more, and if the pilot was killed, it means a higher price to the stamp collector.

A clerk in the St. Louis Postoffice has an exhibit of four letters which he thinks are the only ones saved when Pilot Lewis L. Bowen crashed and was killed at Columbia, Mo., last December. If it is established that there are the only four that were saved, Vining says, the envelopes will be worth about $25 apiece.

Another exhibit has an envelope carried by the Akron when it crashed. It was autographed by the three sruvivors.

Not only postage stamps are shown. There is an exhibit of all the Christmas seals ever issued by tuberculosis societies here and abroad. Vining says some of these, because of their scarcity, are valuable.

The exhibit will be open every day until next Sunday from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. The convention, which about 400 collectors from out of town are expected to attend, will open Thursday and last through Sunday. The annual auction sale will be held at the hotel Friday night.

CROWDS ATTENDING SALZBURG MUSIC FESTIVAL SET RECORD

By the Associated Press.

SALZBURG, Austria, Aug. 19. — The record rush of foreign tourists to Salzburg this season for the music festival was hailed today by American Minister George S. Messersmith as an indication of the return of Austria to a position as a world music center.

Salzburg has been enjoying the best season since the disastrous days of 1914. Hotels are not only full but jammed, with many celebrities sleeping in bathrooms. An Indian Maharajah of fabulous wealth has been struggling to get along in a "suite" of one small room. Thousands of visitors have managed to obtain rooms in private homes. Americans have been more numerous this year. German visitors have been few.

$27,056,268 OF WORKS FUND FOR EDUCATION

Youth Administration Gets Money to Employ College, High School Students.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — The National Youth Administration today received $27,056,268 of works relief funds to aid students all the way from high school to college graduate course.

In announcing the allotment by President Roosevelt, Aubrey Williams, Youth Administration director, estimated it would provide part-time jobs for 323,792 young men and women between 16 and 25. It will be divided as follows:

When set up, the Youth Administration was promised $50,000,000 in all.

Williams said this student aid, a continuation of the relief administration's education program, would be administered by Dr. Lewis Alderman. To emphasize the need for high school student aid, to supply carfare and lunch money to children of relief families, he said 700,000 dropped out of school last year.

Colleges agreeing to accept students helped by the Youth Administration receive funds to care for 12 per cent of their enrollment.

A movement to seek the appointment of the Duke of Kent, third son of the King, as Governor-General was reported recently in Australia.

DETECTIVE DIES

JAMES H. SMITH.

JAMES H. SMITH DIES, EX-CHIEF OF DETECTIVES

Also Headed Frisco Railroad Secret Service, Worked for Kerens Interests.

James H. Smith, former Chief of Detectives, and former head of the Frisco Railroad secret service, died at 7:20 a. m. today of a heart attack at his home, 4521 Newberry terrace. He was 72 years old and served the Police Department 18 years and the Frisco 11 years before his retirement from the road's service in 1918.

He was long associated with the late Richard C. Kerens, railroad capitalist and Ambassador to Austria-Hungary. In recent years he was employed by the Kerens estate as guardian of Richard C. Kerens Jr.

Mr. Smith entered the Police Department in 1889, at the age of 26. He served as patrolman until 1891, when he was made a detective under Chief William Desmond, noted thief-catcher. He spent a year and a half in the Bertillon department, then newly organized. In 1899 he was promoted to be Desmond's assistant.

Employed by Kerens.

He served as Assistant Chief of Detectives through 1902, then resigned to serve with the Frisco, and at times to serve the Kerens family, business and political interests. Early in 1905, when Kerens carried on a fight for a Senate seat, to be awarded by vote of the then Republican Legislature, the former detective was active in his behalf at Jefferson City. Kerens could not win the Senate seat for himself, but prevented Thomas K. Niedringhaus from getting it, the Legislature compromising on William Warner.

Returning to the Detective Bureau in 1907, in the middle of the Folk reform administration, he served for a time as Assistant Chief of Detectives, then as Chief.

Chief Smith directed the investigation which led to the arrest of William Lowe and George Ebeling in the Missouri Pacific mail car robbery of Jan. 21, 1910, near Glencoe, St. Louis County. Ebeling was arrested in Hot Springs, and evidence in his possession helped in convicting Lowe, who ran a downtown brokerage office in St. Louis. Lowe was sentenced to 43 years and Ebeling to 15 years in Leavenworth prison.

Joined Frisco in 1911.

In 1911, Chief Smith resigned from the Detective Bureau and took the position of chief special agent of the Frisco, replacing Sam Allender, who was made Chief of Detectives in his place. He served with the Frisco until 1918.

In wartime, former Chief Smith did special work with the intelligence service of Government departments.

Chief of Police McCarthy, who was assistant under Chief Smith, today recalled his former superior as a hard man in his dealings with criminals, one who considered a criminal his natural enemy, and was not averse to use of physical force in questioning those whom he believed to be guilty of criminal acts.

Handling of Politicians.

To a politician, interceding with him for a crook, Chief Smith once declared that "every thief who comes in here while I am in charge will leave with a cross-mark on his back." Another time, when a member of the House of Delegates called at the Chief's office, accompanied by a man with a record with the complaint that the detectives were arresting him whenever he appeared on the street, Chief Smith locked up the man, after thanking the delegate for bringing him in.

The funeral will be held at 9:30 a. m. Thursday from the family home to Visitation Catholic Church, Taylor avenue near Easton. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Helen Nelson, wife of A. E. Nelson, and Mrs. Dorothy Nelson, wife of V. P. Nelson, both living at the family home.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT TO USE OWN POSTOFFICE ARCHITECTS

Illinois Congressmen Informed That Policy Is Against Employment of Private Supervisors.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — Illinois' Congressmen have been informed by the Treasury Department that its own architects would be employed on practically all new Postoffice buildings under the second deficiency appropriation bill to save 2 per cent of the cost.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen, Republican of Pekin, Ill., said this would deprive a score or more of Illinois "private" architects from receiving the customary fee for supervising construction. The Congressmen were told that the procurement division had been enlarged to the point that all buildings, not under contract a year ago, would be under the sole supervision of the Federal Government.

"We have discovered," Dirksen said he was told, "that in many of the cases where work has been held up, it has been on those jobs where private architects have been in charge."

GERALD THOMPSON PLACED IN DEATH CELL AT JOLIET PRISON

Three Guards Placed Over Peoria Man Sentenced to Die Oct. 15 for Murder of Mildred Hallmark.

By the Associated Press.

JOLIET, Ill., Aug. 19. — Gerald Thompson, 25-year-old Peoria toolmaker, who was sentenced to die in the electric chair Oct. 15 for the murder of Mildred Hallmark, last night became Convict No. 1768 at the old State Penitentiary. He was rushed here secretly from Peoria by Sheriff Marcus Olson and three guards. Examined at the diagnostic hospital, Thompson was later placed in a cell in the "solitary house."

Three guards, one for each of the eight-hour shifts, were assigned to guard Thompson's cell, the only one now occupied in the death house. Before entering the prison, Thompson posed briefly for photographs. His shoulders sagged as he turned to a guard and said, "I wish they would get this over with."

Sheriff Olson said there was no mention of the death sentence during the two-hour ride from Peoria. Thompson's only topic of conversation on the "last ride" was his automobile, the car in which he admitted he attacked Miss Hallmark.

MISSOURI PUBLISHER DIES

Franklin A. Wiggs, Editor of Marble Hill, Succumbs at 78.

By the Associated Press.

Wiggs had operated papers at Mountain View and Charleston, Mo. In 1904 he started the Lutesville Press, which he merged in 1922 with the Banner in Marble Hill, an adjoining community. His widow, a son, three sisters and a brother survive.

'NEW DEAL BUBBLE HAS BURST,' DECLARES TREADWAY

Points to Unemployed, Relief Rolls and Farm Scarcity Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — Representative Treadway (Rep.), Massachusetts, in a radio talk last night on "A Republican's Viewpoint on the State of the Union," declared that the "New Deal bubble has burst."

"In spite of all the laws that have been passed," he said, "and all the borrowed money that has been spent, there are still more than 10,000,000 men out of work, some 20,000,000 of our people are on relief, industry is in the doldrums, and agriculture, sadder but wiser, is reaping the whirlwind of the administration's program of scarcity."

Treadway asserted that, instead of promoting recovery, "most of the policies and legislative enactments of the present administration have placed stumbling blocks in its way."

He especially assailed President Roosevelt's fiscal policies, the tax bill and the reciprocal tariff, and charged that the executive "has shown an utter disregard for constitutional limitations."

11 Cook County Paintings Stolen.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19. — Eleven paintings on exhibit at the Cook County fair—including one of President Roosevelt called "The Man of the Hour"—have been reported stolen. Police said the painting of Roosevelt, by Carl Olson, was to have been sent later to Washington for the President's inspection.

GASOLINE SHORTAGE IN U. S. WITHIN 8 YEARS PREDICTED

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—A serious shortage of petroleum and its principal derivative, gasoline, in the United States within the next five to eight years was predicted here today by experts in a report prepared for presentation to the American Chemical Society.

The shortage, it was declared by Dr. Benjamin T. Brooks, consulting chemical engineer of New York, and L. C. Snider, geologist of New York, will bring higher prices and an increase in petroleum imports from other countries. They added, however, that "the shortage will be experienced many years before the United States supply is exhausted."

Dr. Brooks, who will submit the report to the ninetieth meeting of the Chemical Society after it opens here tomorrow, said that in addition to increasing imports and prices, the expected shortage will force more general use of small, low-powered motor cars.

BANKS WRITE OFF BILLION IN BAD PAPER

14,124 Insured Depositories Sweep Out Losses Accumulated During Depression.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — A Government report today indicated the nation's banks have swept huge amounts of questionable paper from their assets.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announced that 14,124 insured banks wrote off their books in 1934 a total of $1,130,000,000 in losses accumulated during the depression.

The FDIC added that this was made possible because the banks received $650,000,000 net in new capital. It said this was supplied largely by the Government's Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Despite the losses, the FDIC figures disclosed, the banks' assets rose from $40,610,000,000 to $47,370,000,000 during 1934 and deposits increased from $31,300,000,000 to "about $39,000,000,000."

FDIC insurance of deposits in the banks covers each deposit up to $5000, whereas formerly the maximum was $2500. Chiefly because of this change, and because of the increase in total deposits, the FDIC said its liability for insured deposits increased from $10,940,000,000 to $16,640,000,000 during the year. One-half of the growth of bank deposits during the year was attributed to heavy purchases of Federal obligations.

Net earnings of insured commercial banks in 1934 were figured at slightly more than $1 for each $100 of available funds, which was declared to be equivalent to a 7 per cent return on total capital account. This was interpreted as reflecting the liquid condition of banks.

STAGE PAIR ANNOUNCE THEY HAVE PATCHED UP QUARREL

Otis Chatfield Taylor of New York and Miss Miriam Battista Say They Plan to Wed.

FALMOUTH, Mass., Aug. 19.—Miss Miriam Battista, 21-year-old actress, announced yesterday that her quarrel with Otis Chatfield Taylor of New York, had been patched up, and that they would be married. Taylor confirmed the statement. They were to have been married Saturday night.

Neither Miss Battista nor Taylor would now say when the wedding would take place. Of her announcement Saturday that the wedding was off, Miss Battista said: "I'm afraid I was just tired and excited." Taylor said: "I guess we had an explosion. I'm afraid we both said things we didn't mean and we hurt each other very cruelly. But now everything has been made up. We plan to be married later on."

JEWEL THEFTS ON LONG ISLAND

Burglar Invades Homes of Two Prominent Residents.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A burglar took $2600 in cash and jewels yesterday from the homes of two prominent residents in the exclusive Lattingtown (Long Island) district. F. Trubee Davison, former Assistant Secretary of War, and Artemus Gates, president of the New York Trust Co., reported the thefts.

Without disturbing Mr. and Mrs. Davison, four children and seven servants, the thief entered an open door of the Davison home and took articles valued at $2500, including $40 cash, two diamond and ruby rings and a diamond and sapphire bracelet. At the nearby Gates residence, Mr. and Mrs. Gates, two children, two guests and six servants slept while a thief obtained $160 cash and a set of shirt studs.

TUNA FISHING BOATS RELEASED

Threatened International Incident With Mexico Smoothed Over.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—What threatened for a time to become an international incident involving the governments of the United States, Japan and Mexico appeared today to have been smoothed over with the release of 15 Southern California tuna boats by Mexican Government ships.

Notice of the release was received at San Diego by Fred Schellin, president of the American Tunaboat Association. The boats, valued at $1,200,000 with their cargoes, belonged to the San Diego-San Pedro tuna fleet. Four were manned by Japanese and the remainder by Americans. The boats were reported held over improper licenses, but apparently all inspected had regular papers.

STE. GENEVIEVE BEGINS 4-DAY CELEBRATION

Pageant Depicting Founding 200 Years Ago to Be Presented in Stadium.

By the Associated Press.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Aug. 19

The bi-centennial celebration of the founding of Ste. Genevieve officially began today. For four nights a pageant will be presented in an outdoor amphitheater depicting the history of the Louisiana Territory through French, Spanish and United States control.

At least two-fifths of the residents have a part in the pageant. Stands have been erected to seat 14,000 persons. A creek has been dammed to provide a waterway between the stands and the stage deep enough to allow those representing voyagers to paddle canoes.

In this river town, 60 miles south of St. Louis, many buildings still are in use which were built as early as 1782. Flowers bloom profusely behind gleaming white picket fences. The streets are narrow. Beneath the pews of the Catholic Church lie buried the ancestors of many who worship there today.

The Very Rev. Charles L. Van Tourenhout, "Father Van," conceived the idea of a pageant two years ago and presented it to civic leaders.

Philip Francis Renault established a trading post and mineral depot in 1735. Frenchmen failed to find gold and silver they sought but did mine quantities of lead. Some say that among the pioneers were families of Acadians exiled by the British from Grand Pre in Novia Scotia.

SUIT TO ANNUL MARRIAGE OF GIRL TO ESCAPED CONVICT

Action in Behalf of Dorothy Burlew Filed; Friend Also Married a Fugitive.

Suit to annul the marriage of Miss Dorothy Burlew, 19 years old, 3947 McRee avenue, to Kirk Nelson, an escaped convict, was filed today in Miss Burlew's behalf by her father, Robert H. Burlew.

Miss Burlew and Nelson were married in Waterloo, Ill., last Monday, several hours after he and William W. Freeman, another escaped convict, had held up an automobile supply company. Freeman married Miss Charlotte Tomsen, 18, 1903 Virginia avenue, a friend of Miss Burlew, at the same time. In obtaining the marriage licenses, Nelson gave his name as Frank Kelly and Freeman said he was Raymond Stanton.

Nelson and Freeman escaped last March 10 from Algoa Reformatory, where they were serving terms for robbery.

They have admitted seven store robberies in St. Louis in the five months since their escape.

GOV. PARK APPROVES SALES TAX 'RECEIPTS'

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON City, Aug. 19. — Gov. Park today asked all citizens to co-operate in the enforcement of the new State sales tax law, and in payment of the tax, after the new act, doubling the present sales tax of one-half per cent and requiring that the tax be passed on to the buyer, becomes effective Aug. 27.

The Governor commended, as "practical and simple," the cardboard disc token, or "receipt," which was adopted by State Auditor Forrest Smith on Saturday as the medium for payment of the tax on purchases of less than $1. This "receipt, close' resembles a milk bottle cap.

"I feel quite certain that the citizens of Missouri, realizing that old age pensions, relief for the poor and distressed, and the care of our unfortunate insane are dependent upon the proper collection of the sales tax," the Governor said, "will wholeheartedly co-operate in the enforcement of that law and willingly obey its mandates. The cost and inconvenience are inconsequential compared with the great good to be accomplished."

Reports of Legal Test.

The Governor, in issuing that statement, made no comment on reports that a suit to test the constitutionality of the new law might be filed. Opponents of the act have asserted that it violates the State Constitution in attempting to make individual merchants tax collectors, in the collection of the tax on each sale.

The token or "receipt" design adopted by Smith, as has been told, is a thin cardboard disc, about one and a half inches in diameter. Around the rim is an inscription, "Missouri Retailers' Sales Tax Receipt." In the center is a facsimile of the State seal, and the denomination, both in words and numerals, of the value of the "receipt." The receipts will be issued in one mill and five mill denominations.

The one mill "receipts" will have a blue border and the five-mill tokens a brown border.

Cardboard Discs Temporary.

The Auditor said the "receipts" would be distributed through banks to taxpayers and merchants. After the circulation becomes general, buyers of goods subject to the tax could obtain the "receipts" from merchandise, Smith said, either by purchase or as change on sales transactions.

Smith said the cardboard discs were temporary, and that if the system proved successful, the "bottle caps" would be replaced later with a like design of more durable material, such as celluloid or metal.

The new act carries a provision designating the tax as an emergency one, and providing it shall become inoperative on Dec. 31, 1937. This operative period could be extended, however, by subsequent Legislatures, and such action is likely, because of the permanent nature of some of the uses proposed for the revenue derived from the sales tax.

Attorney for Firm That Will Make Them Suggested Discs.

The plan of issuing cardboard discs resembling milk bottle caps for receipts for the 1 per cent State sales tax, effective Aug. 27, was suggested by State Senator Jerome M. Joffee, Kansas City Democrat and attorney for the National Manufacturing Co. of Kansas City, which has received the contract to manufacture the receipts for the State.

Senator Joffee, reached by telephone at Kansas City, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that State Auditor Forrest Smith, administrator of the sales tax law, agreed to adopt the plan after a conference at Jefferson City Thursday. Joffee said he acted in the interests of providing a convenient form of sales tax receipt as well as in behalf of his clients.

The State will play $520 for 1,000,000 receipts. The first order for 10,000,000 receipts of one mill denominaion and 5,000,000 of five-mill denomination has been placed. Joffee was unable to estimate the total amount required for future use.

Under the plan adopted by Auditor Smith, consumers will pay one mill on purchases of 1 to 14 cents and an additional mill on each additional 10 cents of the purchase price.

SEARCH FOR MISSING PLANE

Craft, Four Aboard, Left Helena, Mont., Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 19.—The Governors of Indiana andn Colorado organized today a three-state search for private airplane, believed to be carrying four passengers, including Burnside Smith, an Indianapolis business executive, after it was reported the ship had been missing since Thursday on a flight from Helena, Mont., to Denver.

In the ship were Smith, president of the Aero Mayflower Transit Co. of Indianapolis; his pilot, Dick Arnott, manager of an Indianapolis airport, and possibly Arnett's bride and one other passenger, a man. The widespread search over the thousands of square miles of the Montana, Wyoming and Colorado mountain country was started after Blease Greenlee, secretary to Gov. Paul McNutt of Indiana, called Gov. Ed C. Johnson of Colorado by telephone and told him the plane had not been heard from nor sighted since it left Helena about 2:30 p. m. Thursday.

JUDGE OTIS TALKS AT HOPKINS, MO., DESPITE THREATS

Had Been Warned Not to Go to Homecoming by Mob Which Halted 2 Farm Foreclosure Sales.

ARMED FEDERAL OFFICERS PRESENT

Inquiry Ordered Into Plattsburg Case by U. S. Attorney-General Cummings.

By the Associated Press.

HOPKINS, Mo., Aug. 19.—Federal Judge Merill E. Otis tacitly answered threats of personal violence from farmers infuriated by foreclosure sales in addressing a homecoming gathering at this country town yesterday.

Armed Department of Justice men attended, however, under orders to see that no harm befell the calm, sturdy jurist. Townspeople and farmers of the Hopkins area made up the small, friendly audience.

The Kansas City Judge was threatened with a beating by mob leaders who blocked two foreclosure sales in Northwest Missouri in the last week. He ordered a Federal grand jury investigation of disorders at a scheduled Plattsburg (Mo.) sale.

"My father and his father," Judge Otis told his listeners, "were farmers, American farmers. I know of no prouder title. They depended upon themselves. They feared God and only God. They loved their country and obeyed its laws. I rejoice that I am here with you today.

"Nothing could have kept me from coming to this little town where my mother lives, where my father died."

Of the foreclosure disorders, at Plattsburg and Maysville, he said only "it is not proper for a Judge to discuss any matter that may later come before him."

Judge Otis, the first Federal jurist to hold unconstitutional the moratorium act, inferentially defended his decision:

"I would rather say, 'I kept my oath,' than to say I pleased any man," he declared.

"The Ten Commandments say 'Thou shalt not steal.' Robbery is not only when one man holds up another on a highway. The property of others must be respected. If a man borrows money it must be returned."

The warning "we'll do the same to Judge Otis if he goes to Hopkins" came from brawny, unidentified men who disarmed officers and beat two mortgage company representatives in demonstrations for revival of the farm mortgage moratorium, held unconstitutional last May.

Referring jokingly to the threats against him, Judge Otis scanned the trees of the grove in which he spoke and said:

"I see no limbs strong enough to hold up a 175-pound man."

Attorney-General Cummings has ordered a Federal inquiry into the Plattsburg case, where a crowd of 1000 farmers held United States Marshal Henry Dillingham and three aids prisoners for three and one-half hours Thursday, disarmed two and beat one.

At Maysville, a Sheriff's auction was blocked by similar tactics and mortgage company representatives were beaten.

YOUTH ACCUSED OF SHOOTING MEN WHO GAVE HIM RIDE

Transient, Former St. Louisan, Says He Will Waive Extradition to Arkansas.

James Everett Wilson, 20-year-old transient and former St. Louisan, arrested in East St. Louis yesterday, said today he would waive extradition to Little Rock, Ark., where he has been charged with shooting two men who gave him and his wife and 17-year-old son a ride in their truck last Tuesday.

Deputy Sheriffs from Little Rock who arrived today for the prisoner, said the men, both shot in the back, were in critical condition and that Wilson's wife and baby also were in a hospital, suffering from injuries suffered when Wilson turned the truck over in a ditch after shooting the men.

Wilson, in a written statement obtained by East St. Louis police, said "something went wrong in my head," causing him to shoot the truck operators and steal their truck. He told police he served 14 months in a Federal reformatory for stealing an automobile in St. Louis in 1931 and had been "on the bum" since.

Police said they arrested Wilson under the Municipal Bridge after another man, whom Wilson had told about the shootings, reported to them. The prisoner said he took a freight train to Dupo after getting his wife and baby to a hospital in Little Rock, and was about to take another out of East St. Louis when arrested.

COAST TENNIS PLAYER CAPTURES OHIO VALLEY SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP

CINCINNATI, Aug. 19. — Joe Hunt of Los Angeles, won the Ohio Valley tennis championship yesterday by defeating Jo O'Brien of Fort Thomas, Ky., 5—7, 3—6, 6—2 and 6—3.

Hunt's California colleague, Bobbie Riggs, was 1934 champion, but was eliminated early in this year's matches, twice postponed during the week because of rain.

PAUL DEAN IS HANDICAPED BY OLD HIP INJURY; X-RAYS TAKEN

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—Paul Dean, who sufffered his eleventh defeat of the season yesterday, today was awaiting anxiously a report on X-ray photographs that were taken this morning to determine the extent of an injury to his left hip which has been bothering him periodically for three years. Paul suffered a recurrence of the injury while pitching against the Braves, and when he reported this morning that he was suffering severe pain, he was excused from the exhibition trip to Lewiston, Me., and ordered to the X-ray laboratory.

Hurt Hip Three Years Ago.

"Every time I bent over to pitch in the late innings, I felt that old twinge in the hip, back near the spine," Paul explained. "I finished the game, but I couldn't go on pitching with that hurting me like that every day. I hurt the hip three years ago pitching in Indianapolis and it was in a cast for a long time after that. It didn't bother me none to speak of last year, but it's got me down now again. When I bend down to pitch or pick up a ball, or when I sit down in a chair I hear something pop, like its out of place."

Dizzy didn't want to make the trip to Lewiston when he learned that Paul wasn't going, but Paul talked long and earnestly and finally persuaded Jerome that it wouldn't be right for him to cause a row by missing the game.

All of that time Manager Frisch devoted to infield drill at training camp to break up the enemy's sacrifice plays was not wasted. Thanks to the precision with which the Cardinal inner line defense functioned in the ninth inning of the second game of yesterday's doubleheader when Joe Coscarart put down a bunt, the world champions are only two and a half games behind the Giants. If that bunt had gone for a sacrifice, or if the Cardinals had merely turned it into a force play, they would have lost both games of the twin bill to the Boston Braves and they would be three and a half games behind the leaders.

Frisch's team was leading, 4 to 3, when the ninth inning opened with a single by Pinky Whitney. The Cardinals guessed that Coscarart would try to sacrifice and as Bill Hallahan pitched, Martin and Rip Collins moved in with Wild Bill to cover the bunt territory. Frisch dashed over to cover first, and Leo Durocher moved over to second.

Coscarart bunted and Martin pounced on the ball with the speed of a cat. Without a moment's hesitation, he wheeled and hurled to Durocher, who was waiting for the ball. Leo caught and threw the ball as though it were all one motion and the ball reached Frisch in time to complete a double play.

It was well, as Al Spohrer then walloped a home run into the left field seats and if there had been anybody on base that blow would have won the ball game, 5 to 4, and it would have been a double-defeat for the Redbirds, as Paul Dean had bowed to Fred Frankhouse in the opener, 2 to 1.

But Spohrer's four-bagger merely

This Run Helped the Tigers Increase Their Lead to Eight Games

"Goose" Goslin, outfielder of the league-leading Detroit club, sliding across the plate on Bill Rogell's triple in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with the Yankees. By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 19. — Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, Cal., and Catherine Winthrop of Boston, the fourth seeded team, today opened the men's and women's national doubles tennis play at the Longwood Cricket Club by defeating Mrs. Karl Pickhardt and Virginia Ellis of Brookline, 10—8, 6—3, in a second round match.

Sam Willaman, Noted Football Coach, Dies After Operations

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19.—The unexpected death of Sam Willaman,, college football coach, who held that "the boy comes first, the school second and the public third," shocked the gridiron world today.

Willaman, football mentor at Western Reserve University here, and former coach at Ohio State University and Iowa State College, died in a Cleveland hospital yesterday, a few hours after undergoing two emergency operations for a chronic intestinal ailment.

Although he had not been in the best of health for several months, his condition had not been regarded as serious.

Willaman had considerable success with the various football teams he developed, but throughout his career he always maintained that, win or lose, the game was just a game and all in fun.

Kept a Sane Viewpoint.

He taught his players to win, but an honorable defeat to Willaman ws only a disappointment—never a tragedy.

Willaman was born at Salem, O., 45 years ago, worked in the steel mills there in late boyhood, and then went to Ohio State, where he became a star fullback. He became head coach at Iowa State in 1922, and returned to Ohio State as assistant coach in 1926.

After Dr. John W. Wilce resigned as head coach of the Buckeye squad Willaman took over the job in 1929, and the teams he trained there invariably were among the strongest in the Western Conference.

Willaman, however, taught an orthodox style of football that in the opinion of many Ohio State supporters failed to give the Buckeyes as many victories as seemed reasonable to expect with the man power available.

Won Title Last Year.

After the 1933 season, Willaman resigned at Ohio State to accept the coaching job at Western Reserve, and his team there last year won the Big Four championship. Its only defeat was a 76-0 rout administered by the Ohio State University eleven, coached by Francis A. Schmidt.

Funeral services for Willaman will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at a chapel on the Western Reserve campus. Additional services will be conducted at 1:30 p. m. in Salem, where the body will be buried.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Battle of the Century Is Off.

JUST as the tennis world had its palate all set for a juicy tidbit, Helen Wills Moody spoiled the banquet.

Her decision not to compete in the U. S. national tennis tournament wrecked her scheduled return engagement with that other Helen, Miss Jacobs, and deprived Forest Hills fans of what had promised to be the piece de resistance of the entire tennis year.

The announcement came Saturday without warning, as Mrs. Moody had indicated her intention to compete, following her return from Wimbledon, where she had won such a brilliant uphill match from Miss Jacobs.

MRS. MOODY.

If Mrs. Moody's withdrawal stunned the public, it prostrated United States Lawn Tennis officials who had counted on the Moody - Jacobs feud to upholster the association's gate receipts to overstuffed proportions.

The box-office grief of the tennis body was made more poignant and audible—by the announcement of Miss Dorothy Round, No. 1 woman tennis star of England, that she also would not compete because she had been asked to play on Sunday. Miss Round is a Sunday school teacher.

The women's tennis tourney, which had the earmarks of a better money prospect this year than even the men's event, now has sunk to minor importance.

The exasperation of the U. S. L. T. A. tennis officials doesn't have to be described. You can feel the heat waves one thousand miles away.

Whether the incident will enhance Mrs. Moody's popularity with the U. S. L. T. A. we leave it to you to judge. You have one guess.

JAPANESE SWIM STARS TRIM AMERICANS, 36 POINTS TO 27

WINNERS BETTER 2 WORLD MARKS, CAPTURING 3 OF FINAL 4 EVENTS

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Aug. 19.—Winning three of tonight's four final events, the Japanese swimming team defeated an all-star United States squad in a three-day meet for world supremacy in the sport. The point score was: Japan, 36; United States, 27.

The Japanese mermen demonstrated their superiority over the invading American by taking the final event, the 800-meter free-style relay, in 8m. 52.2s. This time bettered the world record of 8m. 58.4s., made by a Japanese team in Los Angeles, Aug. 9, 1932.

Japan's winning relay men were Masanori Yusa, Ishi Harada, S. Makino and Hiroshi Negami. The American team was composed of Peter Fick of the New York Athletic Club, John Macionis of Philadelphia and Yale University, Art Lindegren of Hollywood and Jack Medica of Seattle.

Negami Betters World Record.

Hiroshi Negami of Rikkyo University won the 800-meter free-style event. Jack Medica of Seattle took second place for the United States team, and Ishi Harada of Japan was third. The time was 10m. 2.4s., bettering the listed world record of 10m. 8.6s., made over a 50-meter course by S. Makino of Japan, in Tokio, June 25, 1933.

Peter Fick of the New York Athletic Club put the visitors back in the running again with victory in the 100-meter free style, in 57.2s. Masanori Yusa of Nihow University was second, and T. Arai of Japan third.

Kiichi Yoshida of the Saeki Middle School won the 200-meter backstroke in 2:35.6. In second place was Danny Zehr of Fort Wayne, Ind., with Kentaro Kawazu of Meiji University third.

Medica Wins Close Race.

Three breath-taking victories by the Americans in yesterday's four-event program had reduced the Japanese lead from 14 to 7 to 22 to 20.

Jack Medica, Seattle speedster, was credited with victory over Hiroshi Negami of Rikkyo University in the 400-meter free-style race, but his margin was so narrow the official stop watches did not discern the difference. The time for both men was 4:45.2, one and one-tenth seconds under the recognized world's mark held by S. Making of Japan.

Only Reizo Koike's victory in the 100-meter breast stroke over Jack Kasley of the University of Michigan saved the Japanese from a shutout in Sunday's races. Koike's time was 1:10.2 Tetso Hamuro was third.

Relay Race Is Hard Fought.

Second only to the Medica-Negami race in thrills for the 15,000 excited fans who jammed the stands was the 400-meter relay race. The lead was first with the Japanese and then with the Americans and when Peter Fick of the New York Athletic Club touched the finish line, Masanori Yusa was only a meter and a half behind.

T. Arai, starting for Japan, beat Matt Chrostowski of Olneyville, R. I., but Art Lindgren of Hollywood, swimming the race of his life against Yoshihisa Shimura, overcame the two-meter lead gained by Arai. Paul Wolf of Hollywood maintained the lead against K. Hirano, and Fick needed all of it. Yusa challenged brilliantly, but he could not quite overhaul the madly threshing American. The time was 3 minutes 53.8 seconds.

Taylor Drysdale, Detroit, had things his own way in the 100-meter back stroke, winning in 1:10.2. Russell Brach, Detroit, placed second and Kentaro Hawazu of Meiji University third.

Winning a leg of the relay race was a welcome revenge for Yusa, who bowed to Fick in the 100-meter free style. Fick, trailing by one foot at the turn, foamed home like a destroyer for the phenomenal long-distance time of 57.2 seconds, leading Yusa two feet behind.

Negami Is Medica's Nemesis.

But the night's fullest measure of revenge was Negami's. In addition to showing churning heels to Medica as the meet curtain fell on the relay, Negami turned the tables on his arch-rival in the 800-meter freestyle by grasping victory in the final lunge at the same fingernail margin as Medica's spectacular 400-meter triumph Sunday.

Negami led throughout, with Medica, Ishiharada and Negami seesawing behind. At the 750-meter mark Medica, fourth, made a bid and passed Ishiharada and Makino, and barely failed to overhaul Negami.

Medica was credited with the same time as the winner, 10:02.4. Makino, fourth to finish, was only eight-tenths of a second slower.

THE SUMMARIES

800-METER FREE STYLE—Won by Hiroshi Negami (Japan); second, Jack Medica (United States); third, Ishi Harada (Japan). Time—10:02.4. (Betters listed world record set by S. Makino of Japan in 1933).

Pepper Martin Gains Favor as Candidate For Babe Ruth's Team

Pepper Martin is climbing back into popular favor as a strong candidate for the third base position on Babe Ruth's All-America team this year.

The Cannonball Express has been doing his stuff on the present swing around the National League circuit—hitting, running the bases like a wild man, and generally throwing fear and disorder into the ranks of the enemy.

Saturday's game against the Giants offers a perfect example of his work. In the third inning, the Cards were one run behind, and one run is important in a game with the Giants.

Martin singled. He got the steal sign. He saw it. The crowd saw it. The Giants saw it. But there wasn't anything those Giants could do about it.

Down to second thundered Martin, sliding into the bag head first. Mancuso's throw was wild, and Martin, after untangling himself from young Al Cucinello, continued to third. Leiber's throw to third was wild, and the Wild Horse of the Osage continued around third base and across the plate with the run that tied up the game and disorganized the opposition.

It's such playing that wins ball games—and causes fans to forget Martin's poor fielding and wild throwing in the Cardinals' last home stand. A guy can't be perfect all the time!

He Has the "Pepper."

What third baseman is more valuable than Pepper? Baseball fans in St. Louis and vicinity will find that question a hard one to answer, for they know so well of his fire and fighting spirit.

It's certain that he will be given serious consideration by Babe Ruth when he Bambino selects his All-America club, and, who knows, he may be named over such sterling players as Jaokson of the Giants, Higgins of the Athletics and other smooth third-base performers.

The Post-Dispatch contest today enters its second week. Cash prizes totaling $700 are being offered, with $150 as first award, to fans who come the closest to naming Ruth's exact team and batting order. In addition, 25 bats and 25 baseballs, all personally autographed by Ruth, will go to contestants who finish just outside the list of cash awards.

Have YOU submitted your team? If not, do so today, and get in the running for one of those valuable prizes!

GRIMM HURLS PERFECT GAME FOR GRANITE CITY

George Grimm realized the ambition of every pitcher when he hurled a perfect game for the Granite City Verhovays yesterday afternoon against the Troy Advertisers, the Verhovays winning 5-0. Grimm had perfect support from his teammates and did not allow a single batter to reach first base. He had 13 strikeouts to help him in his no-hit triumph.

The game was one of three played in the Southwestern Illinois Intercity League. The others resulted in victories for Glen Carbon over Collinsville, 6-3, and East St. Louis over Maryville, 3-2.

Post-Dispatch Babe Ruth All-America Contest Rules

The competition is open to everyone, except employes of the Post-Dispatch and their families.

Entries will close Aug. 31 at midnight, and letters bearing postmark up to that time will be considered eligible.

Babe Ruth will list his selections in the order in which he thinks they should go to the plate, and entrants must do likewise.

An explanatory letter of not more than 250 words must accompany each entry and will be passed upon by the judges. This is as important as selecting the players. Babe himself will write an explanation of his choices. In event of a tie, excellence of the compositions would determine the winner. (Write on one side of the paper only and make your selection on a separate sheet.)

Ten players will make up the team, two pitchers and eight other players, one for each position. Only one team may be submitted by each contestant.

No corrections will be accepted once an entry has been received and filed.

Players must be selected on the basis of their play in the 1935 season only. Performance of previous years do not count.

A player may be placed in a position other than the one he regularly occupies, provided he has played such position in one or more championship games. Otherwise regular positions must be rigidly adhered to. For instance, a regular left fielder may not be placed in right field unless he has played there at least once in 1935.

The prizes will be $150 cash for first, $100 for second, $75 for third, $50 for fourth. Then will follow five prizes of $15 each, 10 of $10 each, 15 of $5 each, 20 of $2.50 each, and 25 or $1 each. The next 25 winners will receive baseball bats autographed by Babe Ruth, and the last 25 winners will be awarded league baseballs, autographed by Ruth.

Mail selections to the Babe Ruth Contest Editor, care the Post-Dispatch.

MITCHELL WINS VANDALIA OPEN AFTER SHOOT-OFF

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 19.—C. F. Mitchell of Roca, Neb., won the shoot-off for the Vandalia Open championship from three other marksmen today, breaking 25 targets from the 17-yard mark.

The event, fired yesterday and ending in a four-way tie, was the last of the preliminaries to the Grand American program which opened today.

E. N. Alley of Oklahoma City, Ok., was second in the shoot-off with 24 breaks from the 19-yard marker. Bill Eldred of Cincinnati, shooting from the 23, and H. G. Aldritt of Excelsior, Minn., from the 20, broke 22 each.

The quartet tied with 98 out of 100 yesterday.

The class championships in six divisions, which attracted 332 marksmen a year ago, had an entry list of more than 350 with more coming in. Indications were the field might exceed 400.

The shooters were greeted by Mayor Charles Brennan of Dayton as festivities opened. Then all mortgages on the grounds here, the permanent home of the American Trap shooting Association, were burned, showing that all debts have been cleared.

POPPIN' OFF

by Dizzy Dean

BOSTON, Aug. 19.

ME and Paul have caught up with our lose total of last year and I have a hunch that we are going to put on a big drive from now on. I lost seven last year and Paul 11 and he dropped his eleventh of 1935 to the Braves yesterday, and I'll say for Paul that he ran into the Braves when they were hot. If they don't cool off that ball, McKechnie's team is gonna kill somebody one of these days. I hope I get a chance to see what I can do toward coolin' it off for them before this series is over, though to tell the truth they always gave me plenty of trouble except when old Babe was in there.

They ask me when I got to Boston what was the matter with the Braves, and the answer is easy. Even a bird dog has a tough time findin' quail if he don't know who he's huntin' with, and that's the fix the Braves is in. But they'll get all that squared up before long and the Braves'll know where the other end of the leash leads and they'll get goin'.

No team with a Bill McKechnie doin' the directin' and with plenty to say is gonna stay down long. But I would like to give 'em two more days to be down. Join the Cardinals and see the world. It's Lewiston, Me., now.

tied the score and so the game went into extra innings and the world champions took advantage of the break and scored five runs in the tenth, to win 9 to 4. Listen to the tenth inning and mark you and mark you well, that it never would have had a chance to happen if it had not been for Martin's quick action on that bunt and Durocher's speed in making the relay at second.

Frisch, first up in the tenth, drew a pass and Medwick, trying to sacrifice, bunted. And there was the difference between victory and defeat in the ball game.

Martin had pounced on a bunt, and had made a perfect throw. Huck Betts, pitching for the Braves, also pounced on the bunt, but he followed with a wild throw to second, and when the ball finally was returned to the infield, Frisch was on third and Medwick on second.

Rip Collins was purposely passed, DeLancey flied to Berger, scoring Frisch with a run that broke the tie and after Orsatti drew a pass, Capt. "Slug" Durocher hit into the left field bleachers for a homer, driving in three comrades ahead of him. And it was all possible because the Cardinals stifled the sacrifice bunt, and the Braves threw one wild.

One Play Decides Opener.

Just as that smooth bit of infield work decided the second contest in favor of the Cardinals, so one fielding play was the turning point in the first game, which the Braves won, 2 to 1.

Frankhouse was in good pitching and batting form. He knocked in a run with a single in the second inning after Lee and Mueller had singled, and he knocked in another in the fourth after one-baggers by Whitney and Coscarart. Meantime he was turning back the Cardinals with the greatest of ease. In eight innings the Redbirds collected only four safeties, two in the first, one in the second and one in the seventh.

Then, with one out in ninth, Manager Frisch lined a single to center. Medwick drew a pass and Rip Collins bounced a slow single between first and second. The blow scored Frisch and it seemed impossible for Thompson to throw out Medwick at third. But he raced in and scooped up the ball with the skill of an infielder, and made a perfect throw to third base. Coscarart saw there would be no time to waste, so he moved up for the throw, took it on the fly and as Medwick slid for the base, he brushed against the ball the instant it fell into Cascarart's glove. It was a fine throw, skillfully handled by the Braves' juvenile third sacker and it saved the game for Frankhouse. Davis walked, but Orsatti ended the game with a fly to Lee. Medwick, had he reached third on Collins' hit, would have been able to score the tying run on Orsatti's fly, but with two out it merely was the final play of the contest.

Errors Help Redbirds.

With better support Danny MacFayden might have gone through the second game to make it a double-victory for the Braves. He was leading, 1 to 0, until the sixth, when two errors enabled the Cards to tally three runs. Martin singled, Rothrock walked and Frisch sacrificed. Medwick hit straight to Urbanski and Martin would have been an easy out at the plate but Urbanski fumbled the ball, the Wild Horse scoring. Then Urbanski recovered the ball and threw wild trying for Rothrock at third and Johnny scored and Medwick reached third, scoring the third run of the inning on Collins' single.

Cantwell then went to the hill and stopped that rally, but yielded another run in the eighth on Rothrock's single, Frisch's sacrifice and Medwick's single.

Philpot Wins Title.

Richard Philpot won the men's singles championship of the Kingshighway Tennis Club by defeating Leo Mertz, 8—6, 9—7, 6—1, in the final, played yesterday.

DUDLEY TOTALS 285 TO WIN IN GOLF TOURNEY; 299 FOR WHITE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19.—A long, curling, 30-foot putt for a birdie three on the final hole gave a special embellishment today to the victory won by Ed Dudley of Philadelphia in the $3500 prize open golf tournament at the Acacia Country Club here.

Dudley scored 285 for the 72-hole tournament which ended yesterday, and the brilliant last putt provided his one-stroke margin of victory.

Clarence Clark of Bloomfield, N. J., and Terl Johnson of Decatur, Ill., tied for second with 286s.

Dudley entered the final round four strokes behind the leader, and had to turn in a 71, two under par, to win the first prize of $700.

He played the first nine of the final round in 34, but reached the eighteenth green with his playing partner, Billie Burke of Cleveland, threatening to tie him. Both needed only fours for 286s. But Dudley, from the outer edge of the green, shot the ball in a slow curve into the cup for a three, while Burke took five and tied for third place with Ted Luther of Youngstown, the Ohio open champion.

Clark and Johnson Falter.

After Dudley turned in his 285, Johnson and Clark still were playing with a seemingly good chance to tie or beat him.

Clark, blistering par on the first nine with a 32, was at No. 17 as Dudley and Burke finished. He got a birdie four and then faced the eighteenth with only a four needed to tie Dudley. On the second shot, however, Clark's ball went over the green into the grassy bank of a sand trap and he needed two more to get down, for a five.

Johnson, who was two under par going to the fifteenth, commenced to slip shortly afterward, but on the last hole he missed by inches his attempt to get a birdie three.

Only Walter Hagen of Detroit, who was playing with Babe Ruth and Lloyd Gullickson of Elyria, O., remained within striking distance then, and Hagen would have been forced to play the last nine in a 34 to get a tie. It was more than he could do. Hagen got a 36-37—73 for the last 18 for a total score of 288.

Babe Ruth, one of the many tournament contestants, kept an "informal" account of his scores, with friendly score-keeping, understood to have been a factor in his 84 on the final round. The Bambino's clowning, however, provided for his galleries whatever entertainment he may have failed to supply in the way of tournament golf.

White Ties for Seventh.

The position of the leading prize winners and the amount they won follows: Dudley, $700; Clark and Johnson, $450 each; Burke and Luther, $250 each; Hagen, $150; Orville White of St. Louis and Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., $112.50 each. White and Picard totaled 299. Johnny Revolta, Al Espinosa and Denny Shute, $100 each; Wilson Crain and Morty Dutra, $100 each; Jake Fassezke, $80; Lloyd Gullickson, $75; M. Carpenter, $70; Maurice McCarthy, amateur, a plate; Abe Espinosa, Felix Seafin, A. Velican and G. Kunes, $53.75 each.

erally, is Pepper Martin. Even blase press-box experts, callous to almost all the thrills of the diamond, sit up when the Wild Horse of the Osage steps to the plate.

The infielders tighten up, the the opposing bench management begins to register nervousness; fans roar, expectantly. For when Martin comes to bat, and more particularly when he gets on base, the dust begins to fly. The whole aspect of the game seems to change and take on a tenseness that no other player since Ty Cobb has been able to create.

That's not because he steals an unusual number of bases. His total today is only 17. That isn't even one-half the total George Sisler annually amassed while with the Browns, and is far, far away from the peaks set by Cobb and other top notchers.

Still—watch the opposing team when Martin is on base. He causes more anxiety than a triple threat man in a football game. He may prove to be the spark plug that will put the team over for another pennant victory this year.

* * *

A few weeks ago Martin was in a bad defensive slump. He could not locate first base with his throws, and his handling of ground balls was causing few cheers in the grand stand.

Today, because of that slump, his averages show him next to last in defensive play. He has driven in only 35 runs. But they are just figures. Martin's value to the club and his popularity with the fans prove that the figures do lie. With Joe Medwick and Dizzy Dean, he probably would divide almost equally a popular vote for the team's most valuable player.

They Must Win.

THE withdrawal from St. Louis of the Eagles, our major league hockey team, is just another evidence of the difficulties confronting sports which operate on a season schedule basis.

The Eagles of St. Louis failed to win more than a dozen games during the season and the result was that the promoters lost about $60,000.

Other non-successful clubs in the major hockey leagues had the same experience. Hockey is merely going through a phase that major league baseball is also struggling with and, thus far, has failed to conquer. How to make the second division clubs pay is a problem with both baseball and hockey leagues. The public is not interested in losers and will not pay to see the local club beaten.

And, for those who think that night baseball is the answer to the second division's prayer, it may be pointed out that ALL the Eagles' games were played at night.

* * *

It seems to be well established that fans will not turn out in profitable numbers merely to see a baseball, hockey or other team game for itself. Unless there is a special interest attached, the customers remain at home, listen languidly to the radio story of the contest and save their spending money for the crucial series or the high spots of the campaign.

Neither baseball nor hockey seems to have found the answer to the situation. Even in pre-depression times this second division problem was becoming insistent in the major leagues.

Not all clubs can be winners or contenders; what then is the answer to be? Can the first division carry the burdens of the second division as well as its own? Not even the club owners can solve that one. They are trying to work it out. They are hoping, in some cases, that night baseball will help. Probably it will.

But it can scarcely cure the situation. A losing team is not an attraction either by day or night.

Discovery First, Omaha Second.

DISCOVERY is a better horse than Omaha by 13 pounds, according to Handicapper Ben Holmes, of Narragansett race track. Weights given out for the Narragansett Special, at one and three-sixteenths miles, to be run next Wednesday, show Discovery will carry 139 pounds which is 13 pounds above the normal weight he should carry as a four-year-old, according to the scale.

In other words, weight for age, Discovery will be conceding Omaha 13 pounds, about three-lengths in distance or three-fifths of a second in time.

It is reported doubtful that Omaha will start in this event, and so another opportunity to settle the year's all-age championship will be wasted.

However, you can hardly blame the proud owner and trainer of a successful three-year-old from balking at testing his racer against an even more successful older horse.

Discovery has shown that weight of this sort doesn't stop him from winning. And a younger horse has about as little chance to beat an older one of his own class as a filly has to defeat a colt—unless weight brings them together.

LEGIONNAIRES, AN UNSEEDED NINE, IN MUNY SEMIFINALS

WELLSTON CLUB ADVANCES AT THE EXPENSE OF GEBKENS, 4 TO 2

The Wellston Legionnaires, only unseeded team left in the Municipal Baseball Association's elimination tournament for the city championship, will play the St. John Nepomuk squad of the Wilson South Side Sodality League, seeded third, in one of the semifinal round games scheduled for next Sunday at Fairground Park. In the other semifinal contest, the Donnelly Stars of the Mound City League, first seeded team, will meet the Foukes, Y. M. C. A. Industrial No. 1 champions and fourth seeded.

In yesterday's quarterfinal contests, the Legionnaires of the Mid-City No. 2 League, eliminated the Gebkens (Diamond Four League), 4-2; the Donnelly Stars (Mound City League) blanked the Dortons (Mid-City League, Division No. 1), 5-0; the Foukes (Y. M. C. A. Industrial No. 1) defeated the Gaylords (Y. M. C. A. No. 2), 7-2, and the St. John Nepomuk (Wilson South Side Sodality League) won from the St. John S. S. (Community League), 11-7.

5000 Fans at One Game.

About 17,000 people saw the games, with the contest between the St. John Nepomuk-St. John S. S. teams attracting the largest crowd, about 5000.

The Legionnaires have won three games in the tournament so far, which is one more than the others have because the Wellston nine was drawn for the only first-round game played. The Legionnaires eliminated the Feldkamps, North Side League champions, in their first encounter, 8-7, after an 11-inning battle.

In the second round, they put out the second-seeded Hoffmeister nine of the South Side League, 8—5. Yesterday, after Boudreau had held the Gebkens for eight and two-thirds innings, allowing only two runs, two errors and a walk filled the bases with two down in the ninth inning. Weisel replaced Boudreau for the Legionnaires and he came through in the pinch, forcing the next batter to ground out and end the game.

Tesreau Wins for Donnellys.

The veteran of Muny baseball, Gil Tesreau, who pitched the Omahas to a Municipal League championship two years ago, hurled the Donnelly Stars to their 5-0 shutout victory over the Dortons. Tesreau had a worthy foe for six innings, Alfred Tucci blanking the Stars until the seventh. Then, a double by Detweiler, a sacrifice and Tesreau's long fly drove in a run. That was enough to win behind Tesreau's three-hit pitching, but the Stars added four more runs in the next frame on four singles and a walk.

St. John Nepomuk had to come from behind to win its slugging contest with the St. John S. S. nine, for the Nepomuk team trailed, 7—2, going into the sixth inning. A three-run rally in the sixth and six more in the seventh inning gave the Nepomuks their triumph.

The game between the Foukes and the Gaylords was, unofficially, also for the championship of the Y. M. C. A. Industrial League, for the Foukes are Division No. 1 champions and the Gaylords No. 2. A drafted pitcher, Fred Rohlfing, obtained from the McQuay-Norris squad, enabled the Foukes to win, for he hurled the entire game, allowing only six hits.

MILLERS WIN TWICE, LENGTHEN LEAD IN ASSOCIATION RACE

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Donie Bush's Minneapolis Millers started the last half of their final Eastern jaunt today, leading the American Association by five and one-half games.

While the Millers subdued Louisville in both games of yesterday's doubleheader, 11 to 8 and 3 to 1, Milwaukee helped out by administering a double defeat to Columbus, 8 to 4 and 4 to 3. Indianapolis, prevented by rain from playing a pair with St. Paul, also benefitted by the Brewers' victories over Columbus, slipping back into second place a half game ahead of the Redbirds. Toledo slowed Kansas City's drive by winning both ends of their bargain offering, 9 to 2 and 5 to 4, leaving the Blues six and one-half games behind the pace-setting Millers.

DRIVER'S VISION OBSCURED BY FOG

In Another Accident Mrs. Marian Lydick Loses Life When Car Plunges Down Bank on Highway 61.

Mrs. Nellie Feldman, a saleswoman for Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., was killed and three other St. Louis women were injured in an automobile accident near Waupun, Wis., yesterday.

The injured were: Miss Edna Feldman, 28, daughter of Mrs. Feldman, fractured right arm and leg, scalp wounds; Miss Nellie Jotter, 38, niece of Mrs. Feldman, fractured arm and leg, skull injury; Miss Leona Hall, 25, fractured neck, leg and arm.

The women were on their way home from a vacation at Green Bay, with Miss Feldman driving. Fog obscured the driver's vision, causing her to miss a curve in the road. The car crashed into a bridge abutment and was badly damaged. The injured were taken to a hospital at Waupun.

Mrs. Feldman, 61 years old, resided at 6006 Waterman avenue with her daughter and niece. All were employes of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney. Miss Hall, an employe of the Federal Land Bank, resides at 6008 Waterman avenue with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Hall. Her parents and her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Donohue of St. Joseph, Mo., were in another car and learned of the accident later.

Auto Plunges Down Bank; Woman Killed; Three Injured.

Mrs. Marian Lydick, 28-year-old waitress, was killed and three other persons were injured when the automobile she was driving left Highway 61 and plunged down a 15-foot embankment at Buckley road early yesterday.

The injured were: Miss Virginia Cooper, a waitress, dislocated shoulder; Mrs. Edna Clopmeyer, waitress, fractured pelvis, and Theodore Toomey, a stationary fireman employed by the city, cuts and bruises. The women were taken to City Hospital, where Mrs. Lydick was found to have died of a skull injury.

Toomey told police that after the women finished their work in a tavern on South Grand boulevard, he took them for a ride to the Meramec River. On the way home Mrs. Lydick asked to drive the car, and he turned the wheel over to her, Toomey said. She lost control, and the automobile swerved off the highway.

Mrs. Lydick resided at 3672 Russell boulevard with Miss Cooper and Mrs. Clopmeyer. Her divorced husband and a son live at Cuba, Mo. Toomey lives at 3638A Folsom avenue.

Man Killed When He Falls From Top of Loaded Truck.

A man was killed and two women were injured in an automobile accident last night on Illinois State Highway No. 13, a mile and a half north of New Athens. John Chore, a beer distributer of Lebanon, Ill., was fatally injured when he fell from the top of a loaded truck as the truck and an automobile collided.

Mrs. Avis Smith, 310 North Douglas avenue, Belleville, who was driving the automobile, suffered a fractured right arm, and Miss Grace Hicks, also of Belleville, a broken right knee cap.

Chore, with Joseph Monken, driver of the truck, and two other men, had gone to New Athens for a shipment of beer. After the truck had been loaded, Chore climbed to the top of the beer barrels in the back. As the cars struck, he fell to the highway, suffering a skull injury and a fractured leg. He died early today.

PROPOSAL FOR ROGERS-POST COMMEMORATIVE STAMP

Made by Oklahoma Philatelic Society—Memorial Service and Funeral Plans.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 19.—The Oklahoma Philatelic Society telegraphed President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and members of the Oklahoma congressional delegation today urging that a Rogers-Post commemorative stamp be issued.

Plans were made at Claremore for a memorial service at the Will Rogers Airport at the time of the funeral in California. Congressman Josh Lee of Oklahoma will be the principal speaker.

Six Claremore citizens, including Mayor J. M. Davis, will attend the California services as official representatives of Rogers' home town. Mrs. Tom McSpadden, sister of Rogers, Mrs. Helen Easton and Ethel Lane, nieces, and Dr. Jesse Bushyhead, cousin, will meet the Rogers family at Kansas City and go with them to California.

Wiley Post's widow decided yesterday that her husband would be buried in Memorial Park, near here. Unless there is a change in plans, the funeral will be held Thursday from the First Baptist Church, with the Rev. W. R. White, pastor, and the Rev. J. H. Gardner of Sentinal in charge. Mrs. Post has gone to Maysville to be with Post's parents until the funeral.

While funeral services will be at Los Angeles for Will Rogers, Mrs. Rogers has indicated burial may be in Chelsea, Ok.

HARLEM NEGRO TO TALK, NOT FLY, FOR ETHIOPIA

(Copyright, 1935.)

ADDIS ABABA, Aug. 19.—Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, Harlem's "Black Eagle and self-styled Colonel, has decided he can best serve Emperor Haile Selassie by lecturing on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute from European platforms.

Julian, who returned to Addis Ababa two months ago seeking a pilot's commission in the Ethiopian Air Force, began canvassing the city for someone to finance the lecture trip.

Since offering his services to Haile Selassie, Julian has been wearing a Major's uniform, and drawing pay. He became a citizen of Ethiopia, but his efforts to get an air force appointment have been no more than tolerated.

The Emperor seems to remember that Julian several years ago cracked-up the imperial pink monoplane, then the "Air Force's" only ship, on his first attempt to take it aloft.

WILL ROGERS ON THE HEREAFTER

Humorist's Introduction to Book by Deceased Artist Friend Recalled.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Some of Will Rogers' thoughts on the hereafter were recalled today from the pages of a book written by his old friend, the late Charles M. Russell, Montana cowboy artist.

Russell died several years ago as he was about to complete the book, "Trails Plowed Under," a collection of reminiscences of the old West, illustrated by his own paintings and line drawings. The book was published last year by Doubleday Doran.

Rogers wrote the introduction in the form of a letter to his old friend in the other world. It was done about nine years ago. With characteristic modesty, Rogers disclaimed the ability to write an introduction. Continuing, he said:

"There ain't much news here to tell you. You know the big Boss gent sent a hand-over and got you so quick, Charley. But I guess He needed a good man pretty bad. I hear they been working short-handed over there pretty much all the time; I guess it's hard for Him to get hold of good men, they are just getting scarce everywhere. . . .

". . . I bet you hadn't been up there three days until you had cut your old pencial and was a drawing something funny about some of their old punchers. . . . I bet you Mark Twain and old Bill Nye and Whitcomb Riley and a whole bunch of those old joshers was just a waiting for you to pop in with all the latest ones, what kind of a bird is Washington and Jefferson. I bet they are regular fellows when you meet 'em, ain't they? Most big men are. I would like to see the bunch that is gathered around you the first time you tell the one about putting the limburger cheese in the old Nestor's whiskers. Don't tell that Charley until you get Lincoln around you; he would love that; I bet you and him kinder throw in together when you get well acquainted. Darn it, when I get to thinking about all them top hands up there, if I could just hold a horse-wrangling job with 'em I wouldn't mind following that wagon myself. . . .

"You will run onto me old dad up there, Charley, for he was a real cowhand and I bet he is running a wagon, and you will pop into some well-kept ranch house over under some cool, shady trees and you will be asked to have dinner, and it will be the best one you ever had in your life. Well, when you are a thanking the women folks you just tell the sweet-looking little old lady that you know her boy back on an outfit you used to rep for, and tell the daughters that you knew their brother, and if you see a cute little rascal running around there, kiss him for me. Well, can't write you any more, Charley; dam paper's all wet; it must be raining in this old bunk house.

"Of course, we are all just a hanging on here as long as we can. I don't know why we hate to go, we know it's better there. Maby it's because we haven't done anything that will live after we are gone.

"From your old friend,

"WILL."

PISTOL IN AUTO, THREE HELD

Police Chase Car 10 Blocks; Driver Said to Be Ex-Convict.

After a chase of 10 blocks, city detectives early yesterday crowded an automobile to the curb at Delmar and Union boulevards and arrested three occupants after finding a loaded revolver on the floor.

Police said the driver was Leon Hickman, a former convict. He denied ownership of the revolver, as did the other two men. They said they did not know Hickman, but had helped him start his car at Broadway and Cere street and had accepted his invitation to have some drinks.

FESS CRITICISES DIRECT RELIEF

Former Senator Says Practice Is Leading to National Bankruptcy.

By the Associated Press.

LAKESIDE, O., Aug. 19.—Simeon D. Fess, former Republican Senator from Ohio, said in an address before the Sandusky-Ottawa County brotherhood here yesterday that "direct relief is leading to a complete surrender of state's rights, to national bankruptcy, a decadence of individual character and a threat to the foundation of the ballot system."

"Money is being spent on those who do not have anything," Fess said, "and, instead of helping the unemployed, is creating a class of unemployables. Unless it is stopped it will lead to inflation and a collapse of the financial system." He praised Senators Glass, Byrd, Gore and Copeland for their opposition to "Socialistic tendencies" in Washington.

SCHACHT'S REBUKE TO JEW-BAITERS MUFFLED BY PRESS

Reichsbank Head's Warning That Attacks Hurt German Business Withheld From Masses.

PAPERS EMPHASIZE JOB-LOAN APPEAL

This Indicates Government Will Consolidate Such Borrowings With Short Term Obligations.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—The stinging rebuke to Jew-baiters by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, was withheld from the masses of German people today.

The official German news bureau which supplies newspapers with texts of speeches made by members of the Government glossed over Schacht's warning that anti-Semitic individuals' "inflamed and undisciplined" actions against Jews are seriously damaging Germany's business.

Instead, the papers high-lighted Schacht's assertion that "there is no better investment than placing one's saving at the disposal of the Reich as a loan for a job creation program."

Similar excerpts from the speech, delivered at the opening of the East Prussian fair at Koenigsberg, were made conspicuous to readers by use of display type.

Plea for Savings as Loans.

"Every individual must in his own interests," said one quoted passage, "contribute to the continuation and completion of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's gigantic reconstruction works by putting his savings in this vital service until the world economic conditions shall be restored to normalcy."

Judging from the emphasis given that part of Schacht's speech which deals with the loans by German savers to the state, it is indicated that the Government's contemporary loans will be consolidated with its short-term obligations estimated by bankers to total nine billion marks (about $3,636,000,000).

Dr. Schacht bluntly told his countrymen that Germany has terrific economic problems to master. He served notice that the amount necessary for solving the unemployment problem "must in some future time be funded out of the labor and the savings of our people."

In scathing tones, he attacked "certain contemporaries" of whom, he said, "one likes to think in the terms of the short prayer: 'O Lord, preserve me from my friends!'

Window Smashers Denounced.

"They are the people who at night heroically besmear windowpanes," he declared; "who placard every German who buys in a Jewish shop as a traitor to his people, who declare all former Freemasons are scoundrels and who, in the justified fight against ministers and priests dabbling in politics, are unable to make a distinction between religion and misuse of the pulpit.

"The aim which these people have in mind is everywhere right and good.

"For secret societies, even if they are harmless, there is no place in the third reich. Pastors and chaplains should save their souls and not engage in politics. Jews must recognize that their influence with us is gone forever. We desire to keep our people and our culture clean and clear, just as the Jews since the days of the Prophet Ezra at all times have demanded the same thing for their people.

"But the solution of all these tasks must take place under the leadership of the state. It cannot be left to unregulated individual acts which cause serious disquietude to business and therefore have again and again been forbidden by organs of the state and the party."

Warns Against Extravagance.

Dr. Schacht advised against extravagance and devaluation schemes and pleaded for "a peaceful economic and cultural exchange with all the peoples and countries of the world."

"Now, as before," he continued, "Jewish stores are permitted to conduct their business. It is up to the Reich Government to decide whether and when they are to be limited. All of those, however, who do not submit to the attitude of the Government are acting in an undisciplined manner and I shall make them responsible in case execution of the financial and economic task outlined by Der Fuehrer is made impossible.

"Business is an exceedingly sensitive organ. Every disturbance, no matter what side it may come from, acts like sand in a machine.

"Inasmuch as all our economy is most intimately intertwined with that of other countries, nobody among us—least of all I, who am the Minister responsible for keeping the German economic machinery going—can be indifferent to the consequences at home and abroad that result from these disturbances."

Newspapers continued to publish reports of anti-Jewish acts throughout the country. At Oestrich Jews were declared by a municipal order to be "unworthy of traveling on the German Rhine" and were forbidden to buy steamer tickets.

Jews who sought accommodations in Starnberg after recently being expelled from Badtoelz, Bavaria, received notice to leave. At Coburg all municipal officials, from the highest to the lowest, were ordered, together with their families, to cease all business and social intercourse with Jews, while at Langenselbolz, Hesse-Nassau, an order was issued advising recipients of public relief they would lose their dole if they associated in any way with Jews.

Lansing-Wilson War Letters Cited to Show Need for Immediate Legislation Defining U. S. Neutrality

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—In support of their plea that legislation defining America's neutrality must be passed now if this country is to keep out of the next European war, Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee and Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, a member of the committee, today made public correspondence not heretofore published that passed between Secretary of State Lansing and President Wilson in 1915.

Taken out of the files of the State Department, this correspondence shows, according to Nye and Clark, that once war has begun, it is impossible to prescribe arms embargoes or make any other move to safeguard neutrality without seeming to commit the country to one side or the other.

The correspondence was made public along with a letter which the two Senators addressed to Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Pittman is also chairman of a sub-committee that has been considering embargo legislation sponsored by Clark and Nye. Two members of this sub-committee, Pittman and Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, are now at work writing a compromise measure which, it is hoped, the full foreign relations committee will approve.

Still Hopeful of Passing Bill.

"We are still hopeful of getting such a bill through Congress this session," Nye said. "The correspondence that we have unearthed in the files of the State Department makes it all too plain what the consequences would be if another European war were to break out before legislation was passed clearly defining the neutral status of this country in the event of hostilities."

"I believe the neutrality bill can be introduced on the floor of the Senate by the first of the week, perhaps tomorrow."

The Lansing-Wilson correspondence is very revealing as showing the part that leading New York banking firms played in bringing the United States into the World War. American exports to the warring countries of Europe—almost entirely to the Allies—exceeded imports from Europe in September of 1915 by more than a billion and a half dollars and the bankers insisted that the only way that Europe could pay was by floating bond issues in this country.

"If the European countries cannot find means to pay for the excess of goods sold to them over those purchased from them, they will have to stop buying and our present export trade will shrink proportionately," Lansing wrote. "The result would be restriction of outputs, industrial depression, idle capital and idle labor, numerous failures, financial demoralization and general unrest and suffering among the laboring classes.

Sale of American Securities.

"Probably a billion and three quarters of the excess of European purchases can be taken care of by the sale of American securities held in Europe and by the transfer of trade balances of Oriental countries, but that will leave three quarters of a billion to be in some other way (computing the excess of exports over imports up until the end of 1915). Furthermore, even if that is arranged, we will have to face a more serious situation in January, 1916, as the American securities held abroad will have been exhausted.

"I believe that Secretary McAdoo (of the Treasury) is convinced and I agree with him that there is only one means of avoiding this situation which would so seriously affect economic conditions in this country, and that is the flotation of large bond issues by the belligerent governments. Our financial institutions have the money to loan and wish to do so. On account of the great balance of trade in our favor the proceeds of these loans would be expended here. The result would be a maintenance of the credit of the borrowing nations based on their gold reserve, a continuance of our commerce at its present volume and industrial activity with the consequent employment of capital and labor and national prosperity."

Had Taken Stand Against Loans.

But the difficulty was, Lansing wrote in his confidential memorandum, that at the outbreak of the war the State Department had taken the public stand that "war loans" were contrary to "the true spirit of neutrality." Thus far, Lansing confessed, he had been able to find no face-saving device for reconciling the change of policy with the previous declaration on "war loans." He deferred to the "flotation of general loans," but for various reasons only the Allied governments stood to gain any advantage from obtaining large sums in this country. The blockade against Germany prevented her from obtaining any considerable supplies from America.

One month after Lansing's memorandum, Clark and Nye point out, the first great Anglo-French loan of $500,000,000 was floated by a banking syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan and Company.

Lansing's memorandum was dated Sept. 6, 1915. One month earlier, on Aug. 5, Wilson had written to his Secretary of State, showing that he well realized that any change in the policy regarding shipment of arms would affect America's status as a neutral.

"Of course," he wrote, "we are arguing only to the special case, and are absolutely unanswerable in our position that these things cannot be done while a war is in progress as against the parties to it."

Changes in Laws During Conflict.

Nye and Clark also quote Wilson's note to Germany in 1915 in which he stated unequivocally the doctrine that under international law any changes in the laws governing neutrality during a conflict "would be an unjustifiable departure from the principle of strict neutrality..." "The placing of an embargo on the trade in arms at the present time," the note said, "would constitute such a change and be a direct violation of the neutrality of the United States."

The legislation proposed by Nye and Clark would forbid the exportation of arms and munitions in the event of a general conflict, and would also forbid foreign loans to belligerents.

During the World War, the two Senators point out, Allied leaders were well aware that once private bankers in the United States advanced loans, the government would be committed to an Allied victory. The same "historic development" would almost inevitably occur in the event of another European war, in the opinion of Nye and Clark.

LAW MUST BE STRETCHED TO FIT ANY OFFENSE, NAZI SAYS

Minister of Justice Says No Legislator Can Foresee All Cases That Deserve Punishment.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Franz Guertner, Minister of Justice, said today Nazi Germany had discarded the old legal principle of "no punishment without law" and substituted "no offense without punishment." Addressing the Penal Penitentiary Congress, he said:

"National Socialism makes the serious claim that all behavior deserving punishment shall meet with its just reward, that no one shall succeed in slipping through the meshes of the law, that, on the contrary, everyone committing an act deserving punishment shall receive the due punishment regardless of the incompleteness of the law.

"Experience teaches us that no legislator can foresee or regulate in advance the facts in every case which he would threaten with punishment if he were all knowing and all foreseeing.

"Punishment must also be awarded in cases where a legislator has left a gap which he would have filled if he had thought of it."

$412,000 for Vocational Training.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 19.—Lloyd W. King, State Superintendent of Schools, announced today $412,493 was distributed to State schools for vocational training during the last year. Of that amount, $276,547 was paid from Federal funds and $135,946 from State funds. King said vocational reimbursement for 1934-35 approximately was $106,869 greater than the preceding year.

Gold Clause Bill to Conference.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — The Senate agreed today to a conference with the House on the gold clause bond bill. The following were appointed conference committeemen: Fletcher, Wagner and MacAdoo, Democrats, and Norbeck and Townsend, Republicans. The House bill bars suits against the Government to collect on gold clause securities, while the Senate bill permits the suits for six months.

FIGHT AHEAD OF LADY ASTOR, SON IN PARLIAMENT RACE

Englishman, in U. S., Says They Both Must Beat Socialist Opposition in Elections.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Lady Nancy Astor and her son, William Astor, have a fight before them in the coming British elections. The son, who arrived in the United States today on the liner Normandie, is standing for the House of Commons from Fulham, a London constituency.

"Fulham," he said, "was always a national conservative stronghold until the last election. A Socialist, John Wilmot, is now the M. P. and I'm going to do my best to get him out."

Concerning his mother, who stands for re-election from Plymouth, young Astor said: "She has strong Socialist opposition, too. We both have a battle before us, as both Fulham and Plymouth are strongly controlled by the working class. We have some things to our good, however, as unemployment in the past year has been cut a million; and the building program for homes at a reasonable price has brought about good effects. The tension is not what it was."

TELLS ROOSEVELT UTILITY BILL WILL PROMOTE EVILS

Congressman Pettengill (Indiana) Writes in Opposition to Holding Company Measure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Appealing for concessions to "honest differences of opinion" on the utilities holding company bill, Representative Pettengill (Dem.), Indiana, told President Roosevelt yesterday that "the industry needs regulation, no agitation."

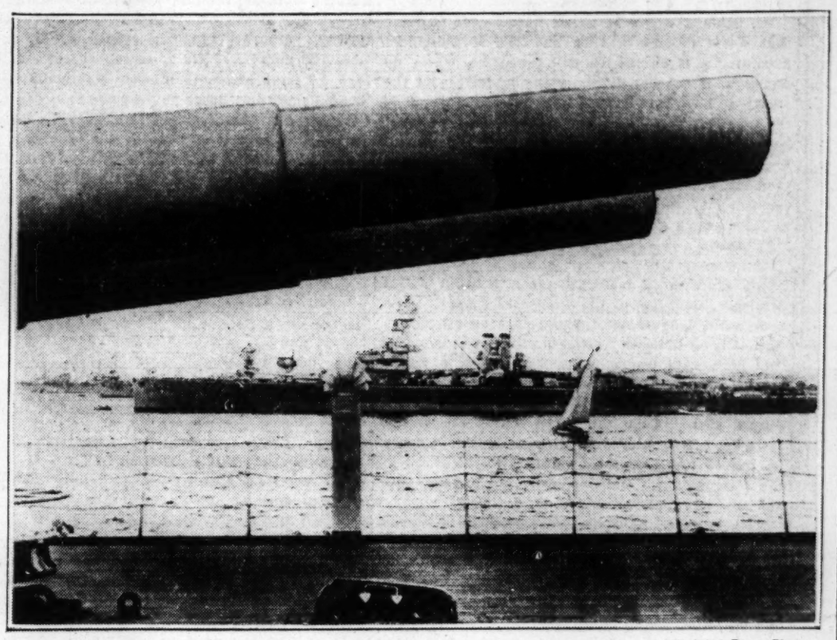

One of the outstanding House opponents of the bill, Pettengill, in a letter to the President, said the section requiring "geographic integration" of utilities would not help in eliminating present evils, but would "actually promote them." This section would require a utilities company to dispose of those holdings not included in the geographical area in which it operates. Pettengill contended this would make for a monopoly of one utilities system in a given area.

"If wisely and bravely administered, the Securities Act of 1933 will cause the superstructure companies like Associated Gas & Electric to die of financial malnutrition," he said.

RED VIEW OF WARS IN SOUTH AMERICA

French Communist Says They Are Proxy Clashes of Imperialism.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—Wars and rebellions in Latin America were declared yesterday to be clashes by proxy of English and American imperialisms by the French Communist leader, Andre Marti, in a speech before the seventh congress of the Third International. These two rival forces, he said, are conducting a "desperate struggle" in South and Central America, and provoking wars between small states to settle their differences.

Charges concerning preparations for "new imperialistic wars," advanced frequently before the congress with references particularly to Germany, Italy and Japan, were repeated Saturday night by Premier Molotov, addressing delegates to the world physiological congress at a dinner in the Kremlin.

"These preparations are being carried out in full view of everybody," he said. "The governing classes in some countries hope to find a way out of their internal difficulties in this manner."

The fate of scientists and science itself hangs in the balance in these countries, Molotov declared. Soviet Russia, he maintained, is showing the real way.

"We have concluded a close alliance between labor and science. The toiling masses are liberated from the domination of rich parasites and see a bright future in the growth of culture of all nationalities and races in the flourishing Soviet world of science."

ITALIAN CORRESPONDENT ORDERED OUT OF GERMANY

Writer, to Whose Reports Nazis Object, Leaves Before Notice Is Received.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—The Propaganda Ministry today ordered Mario da Silva, correspondent of the Italian newspaper, Lavoro Fascista, to leave Germany.

He was accused of writing his reports in a manner displeasing to the German Government.

SOCIAL SECURITY BUDGET IS CUT NEARLY 25 PCT.

$75,000,000 Recommended to Start Program, Compared With $98,491,000 Authorized in Act.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—An appropriation of $75,000,000 to start the economic security program has been recommended by the Budget Bureau. The money would be expended in the next 10 months.

The amount approved by the Bureau, in a message to the House Appropriations Committee, is nearly 25 per cent less than the $98,491,000 authorized for expenditure this year in the security law signed by President Roosevelt last week.

The original estimate was for the fiscal year ending next July 1, but a quarter of that year will have passed before the act becomes operative. Congress is expected to vote the funds before adjournment.

It was said that any deficiency might be met by an appropriation when Congress reassembles next January.

Officials said even more than $98,000,000 may be required before July 1, if the relief administration's plan to remove unemployables from relief rolls is carried out this winter. This program, they said, would add to state old age pension rolls and thus to the amount of Federal grants to the states for pensioners.

The amounts originally requested for the next 10 months were: Old age assistance (for grants to states), $49,750,000; unemployment insurance (for state administration), $4,000,000; aid to dependent children, $24,750,000; maternal and child health, $3,800,000; crippled children, $2,850,000; child welfare, $1,500,000; vocational rehabilitation, $841,000; public health, $8,000,000; aid to the blind, $3,000,000. Administration of these funds and research work by the new Social Security Board (not included in $98,941,000 total), $4,127,000.

Where the Budget Bureau made its reductions was not announced.

A Criticism of the Municipal Opera.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM compelled to protest the type of entertainment staged at the Municipal Theater during the present season. The management should decide now whether the 1936 season is to be one of burlesque and low musical comedy or one of genuine light opera.

During the present season, "Sunny," "Good News," "Roberta," "Madame Sherry" and the revival of "Cat and the Fiddle" have been devoid of worth-while music and replete with bawdy jokes. "Whoopee" promises to cap the climax. Decent people will avoid Muny Opera if the moral tone is not raised.

In former years, if productions fell flat, I at least knew them to be attempts in the right direction. I was spared the hackneyed, blaring jazz that assailed my ears during 1935. Of course, these Tin-Pan Alley shows will attract larger crowds than will true light opera, but the Muny Theater was established to bring true cultural and entertaining music to St. Louis. Profits are not allowed to accumulate. Is it not a fact that in former years, when true opera was the rule, deficits were always paid off by ensuing years' profits despite unfortunate weather or the depression?

For "Chocolate Soldier," "Vagabond King," "Desert Song," "Rio Rita," "Teresina" and "Beloved Rogue," I am thankful—but I'd like Jerome Kern to be forgotten for one season unless his "Show Boat" were to be revived. Ruby Mercer ought to come again next year with Ceeley, Robertson and Jones. Wouldn't the old favorites, "Prince of Pilsen," "Student Prince," "Firefly," "Sari" and "Maytime" be welcomed again, along with two or three new operettas not of the Hollywood variety? T. J. O.

Is Corn Disappearing From Missouri?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MELANCHOLIA. Despair. A general feeling of hopelessness. Such are the moods which prevail among the farmers in this vicinity who now face for the third successive season a partial or complete failure of corn. Once the King of Crops, proviging, as it were, the wheels of the farming industry, it has now become a mere shadow of its former self. And with the inability to grow corn has come the disappearance of the hog, formerly the noblest of animals as a revenue producer. One may travel far over the countryside, frequently in a vain search for the delectable swine whose meat has become a luxury, fit only for the table of the epicure.

Is Missouri slowly but surely slipping from the Corn Belt? Or is this merely a passing phase in nature, later to be replaced by one of bounteous corn crops? There is much debate among the old-timers on this subject. Some say that never again will this section of the State see those waving fields of corn, so luxuriant as to be a delight to the eye, and a satisfaction to the purse. Our climate, they say, with its heat, drouthy summers, is approaching that of the Southwestern or the Southern states. Cotton, tobacco, soy beans, certain of the drouth-resistant clovers, such as lespedeza, must be substituted for the former staple crops.

In the meantime, with this apparent transition of climate has come a hardship unknown even in 1932, which produced a bountiful crop (the only one since 1929) at prices so disastrously low as scarcely to pay transportation charges to market. All must now concede that plenty at a low price is preferable to scarcity at a high price. Man has taken upon himself the responsibility of controlling crop production.

Nature's response is: "I, alone, hold inalienable this right. Woe unto him who would thwart my desires. Upon him will come the lean years, despair, famine, the hopelessness of endeavor, a diminution of material wealth, unknown in the history of any nation."

For Saving Historic Buildings.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

EVERY voter in St. Louis should vote for the $7,500,000 bond issue to improve the river front. It will be the greatest thing that has happened to St. Louis in many years, and will provide employment to many of our citizens.

However, there is one thing that I hope will not be overlooked. In this section are many old-time buildings of historical interest, such as the Old Rock House at Chestnut and the Wharf, that should be preserved.

PREACHING HATRED IN GERMANY.

German business abroad is being seriously damaged by the "unregulated individual acts" of the Jew-baiters and other agitation against "state enemies," Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of Economics, warned the Reich in an address yesterday. Here is official acknowledgment that Germany's pocketbook, if not its conscience, is feeling the abhorrence roused abroad by its campaign of repression, as expressed by the boycott and otherwise.

Dr. Schacht would be naive, however, to imagine that world opinion will be mollified if individual hoodlumism is eliminated and the drive, which he approves, is continued "under the leadership of the state," as he says will be done. For one thing, it is the fanatical preachments of the state's leaders that have inspired the "individual acts" which now embarrass Dr. Schacht. For another, the Nazi Government will fall into greater disrepute by assuming full responsibility for the execution of its cruel policies, which grow harsher as the economic crisis tightens.

There seems little chance that the Economics Minister's counsels of moderation can restrain Julius Streicher, identified by the Associated Press as "Germany's No. 1 Jew-hater," whose growing official influence is an indication of fresh miseries in store for that persecuted people. Anti-Semitism is a fundamental of National Socialism, and Streicher has been its most active exponent. While Hitler, Goebbels and others also preach the creed of racial hatred, Streicher has developed it intensively. For a while, he seemed to be tolerated rather than approved by the Nazi regime. Only recently, his bitterly anti-Jewish paper was suppressed for a time.

Now, however, Streicher is accepted as a leading light of the movement. He has been welcomed to Berlin by the party, and delivered a savage anti-Jewish tirade there last week before 50,000 persons. Further action against the Jews, already ostracised and boycotted, are in preparation under his guidance.

Since the Nazis took power two and a half years ago, the mistreatment of Jews has been carried on. They have been barred from professions, public positions and many forms of employment, restricted in educational opportunities, ousted from organizations, deprived of justice by the courts, hooted, assaulted and imprisoned. The Nazi answer to critics of these tactics has been to point to the fact that Jews still remained in business, but the object of the renewed drive now seems to be to drive them from this field also. Restoration of the medieval ghetto has been urged, and there are prominent advocates of driving all the Jews from Germany.

It would be erroneous, of course, to view only the plight of the Jews in forming an estimate of what Nazi-ism stands for. Their persecution is conspicuous, but they are only one of the groups under attack by the masters of Germany. The Catholics, liberal Protestants, Freemasons, Socialists and all believers in democratic and pacific ideals feel the lash as well. The labor unions have been crushed. Academic freedom has been throttled. Women have been returned to the slave status of medieval times. The Neo-Pagan cult, directed at the destruction of religion, is sponsored by the party. The people as a whole have been deprived of freedom of speech, opinion and press, of all civil rights.

The attack on the Jews began to provide a scapegoat for the sufferings of Germany in the war, inflation and depression. It speedily became a smoke-screen for the destruction of all liberal principles, which Fascism must annihilate. Now that economic problems are growing more serious, the anti-Semitic campaign, along with other repressive drives, is stimulated, to provide a distraction for the people.

Because they are a small group, unable to resist, the Jews offer an inviting target for the rabble-rousers of Nazi-ism. In 1933, of a population totaling 65,306,130, only 500,000 (according to the Reich Statistical Office), or .77 per cent, were Jews—scarcely enough to endanger the nation. Of these, an estimated 80,000 now have fled.

It has often been pointed out how the Jews contributed to the scientific, industrial and cultural progress which glorified the old Germany. They were patriotic citizens, and gave their services loyally in the war, only now to find themselves regarded as aliens, although many families had lived in Germany for hundreds of years. The Nazi zeal for a pure "Aryan" race—which science shows is a myth—has extended to ostracism even of persons with one Jewish grandparent, persons who had never been viewed as members of the Jewish group. This addition has swelled the total of "non-Aryans" by some 2,000,000.

It is to the credit of the German people that there are some still sufficiently balanced to resist the irrational preachings of race hatred. This is shown in the instances produced by such bigots as Streicher: Aryans who continue to buy at Jewish stores, and others who refuse to give up their non-Aryan friends, though either practice has hazardous possibilities in the inflamed state of the mob.

It is no function of our Government to interfere in affairs abroad. But it is the right and duty of humanitarians throughout the nation to let their abhorrence for the practices and theories of the Nazis be known. Legitimate forms of protest serve a useful purpose in bringing foreign disapproval home to the leaders of Germany. The medieval and barbarous scenes being played in Germany deserve the condemnation of all decent society.

WE DISCOVER A HERO.

Let not the enemies of the New Deal make too sweeping an indictment of the administration's spending habits. It may be that Messrs. Roosevelt, Ickes and Hopkins are handing out public funds with the gay abandon of a Coal Oil Johnny, but there is one official in Washington, an unnamed hero of the dispatches, in whom zeal for the taxpayer still burns. He is the one who ordered the execution of a 28-year-old mare, which had been used in breeding experiments with zebras, to save the cost of her feed. There's a chap with all the earmarks of an ideal Director of the Budget.

A NEW MARINE HOSPITAL.

Allocation of more than $1,000,000 in Federal funds will make possible the erection of a Marine Hospital in St. Louis such as circumstances require. The present hospital, on Marine avenue between South Broadway and the river front, consists of outmoded structures which date back to 1856 and 1885. There are now 117 patients in the institution, whereas its normal capacity is only 100. Taking up the recommendation for a new hospital made four years ago by Surgeon-General Cumming, the St. Louis members of Congress, supported by the local Chamber of Commerce, kept the project on the list of worthy public works in the St. Louis area until proper Federal support was forthcoming. Those who devoted themselves to this enterprise can take justified satisfaction in the outcome.

HUMBLING LOGAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY.

Something has happened in Logan County, Kentucky, which mightily perplexes the Courier-Journal. Returns from the recent gubernatorial primary show that 10,908 Democratic votes were cast in Logan County, of which a single candidate, Thomas S. Rhea, garnered 10,127. A search of records going back 15 years shows that never before did half as many Democrats appear at the polls in Logan County as voted in the primary. In 1928, when the same Thomas S. Rhea was running for Congress, 4792 Democrats voted. In 1935, in the face of Logan County's declining population, the 1928 mark was topped by 6216. Logan County's population is 21,875, and the percentage of Democratic voters represents 48 per cent of all human beings residing there.

A pretty little mystery, to be sure. It is not, however, calculated to arouse awe in Missouri. On Kansas City's registration books prior to the November election last year were 248,000 names, 18,000 more than in the presidential year of 1932. This represented 62 per cent of Kansas City's population of 400,000. Since, according to the United States Bureau of the Census, 62.5 per cent of Missouri's population is over 21, Tom Pendergast's machine missed enrolling the entire voting population by one-half of 1 per cent. There's something for the Logan County machine to shoot at.

Of all Democratic votes cast, only 781, or .0716 per cent, were cast against Mr. Rhea, Logan County's pride. Compare this sorry showing with the way things are ordered in the Fourth Ward of St. Louis, presided over by Jimmie Miller. In the State bond issue, voted on in the spring of 1934, the vote in Jimmie's ward was 7253 for to 39 against. This is at the ratio of 189 to 1, and the percentage of adverse votes was .00534. In the senatorial primary later the same year, Jimmie's ward surpassed itself. It gave 5968 votes to Cochran and only 28 to all of his opponents. The percentage of adverse votes was .00466.

We do not wish to belittle the heroic efforts of the Logan machine operators on behalf of Mr. Rhea. We merely cite these Missouri figures to give them something to chew upon in the event they prematurely allow themselves to be puffed up with pride or overcome with vainglory.

IF DEAN INGE WERE DICTATOR.

British luminaries have been writing profusely on the enticing topic, "If I were dictator." All sorts of grandiose schemes for making over the nation and the world have come from the symposium. The Very Rev. William R. Inge, till recently Dean of St. Paul's, dreams of no glittering Utopia, however. His contribution concerns a more immediate and practical topic, though not necessarily one easy of execution. The "Gloomy Dean" says:

> If I were made dictator, I think I should employ the short interval between my appointment and my assassination in overhauling the criminal law.

This was doubtless intended to be startling, and it becomes even more so to Americans when they consider how far their country lags behind Great Britain in this particular reform. In Missouri, bar associations and citizens have struggled in vain for it for more than a decade against an adamantine Legislature. If public opinion fails a few more times to get a response from the Legislature, Dean Inge could poll a formidable vote if he wants to run for the post of State dictator on his platform.

A DUBIOUS PROPOSAL.

Among the bills recently introduced in Congress is one sponsored by Representative Clarence J. McLeod, a Michigan Republican, which would set up a joint congressional committee, composed of members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, to investigate and report on the constitutionality of proposed legislation. We do not question the good intentions of the Michigan Representative. His avowed purpose of stopping "present slipshod legislative procedure" is thoroughly commendable. The question is whether the creation of such a committee would bring the results which he seeks.

One of the obvious tests which every committee employs or should employ before reporting a bill to the floor is whether the legislation proposed is in harmony with the Constitution or at variance with it. Competent lawmakers make that a prime consideration now; there is no need for a committee on constitutionality for them. On the other hand, legislators who do not concern themselves with questions of constitutionality under the committee system as it now exists would not be likely to act on the advice of the joint committee which Mr. McLeod proposes.

In short, it is hard to see how the Michigan Representative's committee could do much good, but not difficult to conceive of its being used by minority groups to delay the advancement of worthy bills.

HUEY LONG'S NEWSPAPER.

The Postoffice Department has acted wisely in overruling the postmaster at Meridian, Miss., who barred Huey Long's newspaper, American Progress, from the mails because, he said, it contained articles that were "libelous, scurrilous and insulting." The postmaster said he would not accept any matter "uncomplimentary to the President, who appointed me."

The paper is a blatant sheet, frequently in bad taste, full of venomous attacks on the administration and Long's enemies. In refusing to bar it from the mails, the Postoffice Department shows that the guarantee of free press stands even in the face of a trying test. The right of criticism is an American fundamental, which would lose its value could it be shut off for even demagogic opposition to those in power. The difference between American standards and those prevailing in Italy and Germany becomes apparent when one considers what would have been the fate of the publisher of such a paper in either of those countries.

If any of the Long paper's matter is considered libelous, recourse can be had to the courts. They stand as a protection both to the individuals criticised and to freedom of the press.

Our Excise Commissioner is now talking about Scylla and Charybdis. For goodness sake, what have those girls been doing?

WRITER'S CRAMP.

—From the Pittsburgh Press.

The Threefold Nazi Crisis

Nazis are fighting invisible opponents on three fronts: religious, political and economic; spiritual forces of great potential power resist but do not challenge state; reaction to crushing of civil rights is reviving underground desire for freedom; terrorism cannot solve pressing problem of rising prices, falling wages and hungry workers.

From the Manchester Guardian.

THE National Socialist revolution, like so many other violent revolutions, is a long and complicated process and not a single event. It is a series of convulsions rather than a single convulsion.

The Nazis have been in power for nearly two and a half years. They destroyed the visible enemy, the Weimar Republic, in one battle almost. But the Nazis, for all their uncanny insight into human nature, especially its weaknesses, lacked deeper imagination and did not reckon with invisible forces. These forces have been growing in strength and have now thrown the Third Realm into a state of violent crisis, in spite of its two and a half years of unchallenged power.

The Third Realm is rocked and shaken about, while all Europe looks on wondering whether a new mass madness has seized the German people or whether there is some reason in what is happening. The Nazis have to strike out in all directions at a foe they cannot see. And this foe never challenges them directly.

The Protestant and the Catholic clergy show the German state all the deference that is due to the state as such, and yet they represent a force that will not submit to the "totalitarian" claims of that state, a force that remains elusive and yet grows in power and moves an ever-increasing multitude of men and women. And so we have the spectacle of the dictatorship which, though in a secular sense omnipotent, is more than impotent in a spiritual sense, for the forces it tries to crush grow in exact proportion with the degree of its endeavor.

The Nazi leaders must be asking themselves, "What is it all about?" But none of them can give an answer. They do not in the least apprehend the spiritual forces they are trying to destroy; they only feel that these forces are different from National Socialism and must therefore be hostile. It is true that these forces, if fully aroused, will be dangerous to the German state. But the state, by trying to crush them, is arousing them more and more and so bringing those dangers nearer which at all costs it would avoid.

For years, nothing has done so much to arouse the militant ardor of the Roman Catholics in Germany as Gen. Goering's recent attack on them. The resistance offered by Protestantism to the "totalitarian" pretensions of National Socialism is likely to remain purely spiritual, though it will be none the less significant for that reason. But the resistance of Roman Catholicism threatens to become visible in a way that must give the Nazis deep concern. Roman Catholicism, if sufficiently aroused, may mean that Germany will lose Austria forever.

Indeed, more than this: Even now there is a deepening estrangement between the Catholic Rhineland and Bavaria on the one hand and Berlin on the other. It does not seem likely but it is never altogether impossible that separatism, which has always existed, sometimes open and sometimes latent and hardly perceptible, may show itself again, in which case the whole question of German unity, which National Socialism was to have answered, will be opened once again.

Even now, there is good reason to believe that a growing multitude of German Catholics would, if their spiritual leaders wished, declare for separation from Berlin. There is in separatism no immediate danger to the Third Realm, but it is an ultimate warning that there is a limit beyond which the Nazi assault on Roman Catholicism may imperil the very existence of Germany as a Power.

But it is not the religious crisis alone that is shaking the Third Realm. There are two other crises, both of them the product of elusive forces which the Nazis have to overcome—the political and the economic crises. National Socialism annihilated all political opponents, and yet everywhere there is political discontent. The Jews are still there, and as National Socialism is largely made up of anti-Semitism, the Nazi leaders think that they can galvanize it into renewed life by persecuting the Jews all over again, and the Jew-baiting Count Helldorf has been made Chief of the Berlin police so that the persecutions may be all the more efficient.

The inward weakness, for all its outward strength, of National Socialism is displayed in constant "radicalism" and in ever-renewed inhuman persecutions. Freedom has been crushed in Germany. But the desire for freedom grows, together with a vague longing for a kind of primitive Communism amongst the poorer classes. The desire finds no form in any organized movement; it is never openly expressed; but it exists—an invisible, elusive, intractable and growing force.

And then there is the economic crisis. No amount of terrorism can remove the dry rot which has seized the whole German economic system. Prices rise, salaries and wages fall, workmen who are beginning to feel constant hunger are also beginning to go on strike, not in any organized manner and without open defiance of the National Socialist state, but nevertheless in a way that will make the strike movement, if it goes on, intolerable and terrifying to the rulers of that state. And far ahead—and perhaps still avoidable—is the menace of inflation, which in Germany as in no other country is an ineradicable, calamitous memory.

No doubt the Nazis would be much happier if they could meet their enemies in open combat and destroy them as they have done before. They would for all the world avoid the present fight with these invisible forces. But they must fight on until the very end. It will be the most difficult fight of all.

ONE POLITICAL DISTINCTION.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

IN these days of political confusion, it is difficult to define Democrats or Republicans. There are many kinds of Democrats and many kinds of Republicans. In some respects, conservative Democrats are leaning toward Republicanism, while progressive Republicans have gone New Deal and radical Democrats are accused of turning Socialistic. But there seems to be one clear distinction between the Republican administration of Herbert Hoover and the Democratic administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt: Confronted by an economic emergency, the Republicans didn't know when or how to start; the New Dealers, apparently, do not know when or how to stop.

Ste. Genevieve's Day

From the New York Sun.

MISSOURI'S oldest town, Ste. Genevieve, on the Mississippi, will celebrate this month the two hundredth anniversary of its founding.

By 1735, the Atlantic coast was settled or was in process of settlement, mostly by the English, but there still remained Florida, the Gulf coast and the Mississippi Valley, over which intermittently fluttered the flag of France or that of Spain. In one of these periods of change, the French settled a colony on the western bank of the Mississippi and named it for the patron saint of Paris. They had a fort at Vincennes and at Kaskaskia, and they set up the Ste. Genevieve colony with a considerable degree of confidence in its security.

In time, Vincennes fell to an American expeditionary force and later Kaskaskia slid down from its lofty position and was carried away by the river. Ste. Genevieve, the least conspicuous of the three, prospered from the first, and became an early river port of importance.

Ste. Genevieve's ambition early in its history was to achieve commercial success. In this it was favored by having no notable rival—St. Louis was not settled until 1764—and its merchants, among them Ferdinand Rozier, whose fame as a business man extended throughout the valley, had their stock brought over the mountains from Philadelphia and thence by boats down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to Ste. Genevieve. There Rozier's store and home still stand as his memorial.

* * *

It was Rozier who brought to Ste. Genevieve his boyhood friend, John James Audubon, who was to become one of the world's most famous ornithologists. They were to be business associates, but Rozier soon discovered that his friend cared less for business than for finding the retreats of birds and sketching them and their nesting places. Audubon's old home in Ste. Genevieve was torn down several years ago.

In the graveyard of Ste. Genevieve, there are many reminders of the romances which make up the history of the little town. One of these is the stone marking the burial place of Lewis Linn, "the model Senator of Missouri." Another marks the grave of the Senator's mother, Nancy Hunter, who, according to legend, carried in her apron balls and powder to relieve a fort besieged by Indians and saved the garrison.

Here, too, are the graves of two men killed in duels that excited great interest in the nineteenth century. One is the resting place of Dr. Walter Fenwick, who was killed by a member of the Crittenden family of Missouri in a duel on an island in the Mississippi. Another is the grave of Charles Lucas, a young United States District Attorney, who was killed by Senator Thomas Benton in a historic duel on Bloody Island in the Mississippi. The records in this encounter were "not favorable" to Benton, who, says a report, contrary to the wishes of his seconds and in violation of the accepted dueling code, forced "a meeting in which Lucas was almost certain to be killed."

And now, after two centuries of existence, Ste. Genevieve asks the world to come and turn back the pages of its past history and to live for a day in its quiet little cottages with their white paling fences and beneath the great golden cross on its old church.

NOTE ON HORSE SENSE.

From the Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer.

A CORRESPONDENT says people should use more "horse sense," pointing out that a horse doesn't drink beer or liquor, smoke or chew.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.

HERE is the way the insiders who run the show on Capitol Hill privately forecast the wind-up score card:

Adjournment—By Saturday night.

Tax Bill—Will be passed in a form approximating that adopted by the House, raising about $275,000,000 in additional revenue, and including as major items a new inheritance tax, graduated corporation tax, super-surtaxes on incomes above $1,000,000.

Central Bank Bill—Will become law with its most important feature, the open market committee, in a form less drastic than desired by the House, but more liberal than proposed by the Senate. Senator Glass, bitter foe of the measure, while forcing concessions in administrative details, will come out second best in his session-long duel with Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles, author of the bill.

Guffey Coal Bill—Will squeak through after some sharp trimming in both Houses in the final hours.

Ship Subsidy Bill — Sixty-forty chance that it will not get through, unless ship building interests behind the bill agree to considerable modification of its more brazen Treasury-raiding provisions.

Neutrality Resolutions—Remote chance that a resolution—with most of its teeth pulled, as desired by the State Department—may be jammed through the Senate. No chance at all that it will get by the House.

Holding Company Bill—Ninety-to-ten chance that it will get hung up in conference committee. Because of the hair-line margin in the Senate on the "death sentence" provision, the bill's backers will resist another Senate test during the time two urgently needed votes, Senators Jim Couzens and Rush Holt, are in hospitals. Instead the Administration will push the bill in the House to try to bluff the Representatives into a backdown. But the chances of doing this are practically nil, and, since the administration is not anxious for a Senate test, its later strategy will be to leave the bill in conference in the hope of doing business when Congress reconvenes next January.

TVA Amendments—Touch-and-go whether they will be log-jammed in conference committee. Democratic conferees of the House, while publicly making a great show of support of the TVA project, secretly are sabotaging this legislation to extend and strengthen its powers. Only chance for breaking up the undercover fight is presidential pressure. If Roosevelt can call off the House conferees a compromise will be reached on the bill before adjournment.

Infantile Paralysis.

SURGEON GENERAL HUGH CUMMING walked into the White House recently and advised the President that because of infantile paralysis the Boy Scout Jamboree should be called off.

He mentioned the distressing fact that already there were 88 cases in New York.

King Cotton.

ROOSEVELT is being squeezed into an increasingly tight place by that all-powerful monarch of the South, King Cotton.

With this summer's crop rapidly coming on the market, the South is demanding a yes or no answer to the question of whether the Government will continue the 12 cents a pound loan on cotton. This, in effect, is a guarantee that the price of cotton will not fall below 12 cents.

Southern Senators have beaten a path to Roosevelt's door with this demand, and what they want is a "yes" answer.

On the other hand, Agricultural Secretary Henry Wallace, plus Right Bower Chester Davis, plus all his other cohorts, oppose with equal vehemence a guaranteed price for cotton. They argue that if they set a precedent on this they will have to do the same for wheat, for corn and for tobacco. They see no end of grief ahead, if they yield on cotton.

To this Southern Senators retort that the precedent was set with last year's 12-cent loan on cotton, that it is too late to turn back.

What is more important, they have pointed out to Roosevelt that no matter how solid he may think the South is for Democracy, there is one combination that can break it—namely, Huey Long plus the price of cotton.

The President has given indications that he will yield.

Merry-Go-Round.

THE Chaplain of the Senate, ZeBarney T. Phillips, receives the same salary as the Chaplain of the House, James S. Montgomery—$1680. Their duties are widely different, however, as Montgomery offers the prayer daily to convoke the House, while Phillips is called upon only three or four times a month. . . . In addition to the experimental work with chrysanthemums and amaryllis, the Department of Agriculture has this year developed three varieties of carnations.

Gen. Johnson's Article

New Defensive Weapons Keep Abreast of Latest Inventions for Offensive War, He Writes.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.

NEW and devastating weapons that will change the face of war are always talked about in peace, but rarely live up to predictions in practice.

Thomas Jefferson (who spent his moments off from statesmanship inventing things) sincerely believed that we could make our coasts forever safe by a multitude of little boats, with beams sticking out from their prows carrying explosive bombs on the ends of them. It was the germ of the torpedo idea, but was wholly impracticable for a good many reasons.

The Macedonian phalanx was a new tactical formation that made better organized use of men and spears, but it was something more than that with which Alexander conquered the world. His father had invented the phalanx and, long before he started on his astonishing career, all military powers had formations resembling the phalanx.

Hannibal was the greatest of the five great captains of mankind—Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar, Genghis Khan and Napoleon. But it was not his use of elephants that won his victories.

There was nothing new about the German use of gas as a weapon. It had been developed many years earlier, but all Powers had agreed not to use it. If the Germans had only withheld that weapon until they were fully ready with enough material to make a sustained gas attack on a wide front, it might have decided the war. As it was, they went off half-cocked and gave the Allies time to develop a sufficient defense against gas.

Exactly the same mistake was made by the British when they introduced the tank. After they disclosed it and before they could capitalize on its offensive value on a broad scale, the Germans developed the checkerboard system of concrete pill-boxes, a new anti-tank use of artillery, and provided their own troops with tanks.

As fast as new weapons are invented, new defenses develop and war does not change its face very much after all.

All of which brings up the repeated stories that the Germans have some new and terrible gas which makes them invincible and that the Italians will have little trouble in Ethiopia because of new defensive weapons.

We are bound by treaty not to use gas on the offensive, but, in providing gas defense, our army has to keep itself informed as to all gas developments. It is an open secret that there is no such thing as a military secret anywhere in the world.

It just isn't true that there is a new army-paralyzing gas. The gases developed during the war were fiendish enough, and they have been made a little more devilish. But Mussolini isn't going to have an easy victory in Ethiopia by pulling any white rabbits out of the old and bloody military bag of tricks, and Hitler has no new and awful magic.

War "is today what yesterday it was," and the only comfortless assurance we can take is that "tomorrow it will not be less."

'ROBERTA' SETS OPERA ATTENDANCE RECORDS

A new attendance record for the 17-year history of the Municipal Opera was established by the musical play "Roberta" last week, when 71,142 opera goers were seated during the six regular performances and the special Friday midnight showing, the latter substituted for the rained-out Monday performance. The previous attendance record o. 68,970 was established during the second week of "Show Boat" in 1930.

The final performance of "Roberta" last night also set a new record for any single night's presentation by drawing an audience of 10,576. Extra chairs were placed in every available corner to accommodate the out-of-town visitors. Approximately 3000 stood to watch the play last night.

Based on "Nervous Wreck."

The Municipal Opera will close its 1935 season this week with Ziegfeld's musical play, "Whoopee," which opens tonight in Forest Park and runs through Sunday night. "Whoopee" will be the twelfth presentation this summer.

Georgie Price, comedian of the stage and radio, will be seen in the leading role of Henry Williams, the "nervous wreck." Gil Lamb, comedian-dancer, who was featured in "Madame Sherry" and "Sunny," will appear this week. Katherine Carrington, feminine star of "Madame Sherry," and Audrey Christie, favorite comedienne of the opera goers, also will return to the Municipal Theater this week.

Duke McHale, Una Val, Rosemary Deering and Freda Sullivan will be seen in specialty dance numbers, while William Holbrook, dance director, has arranged several intricate numbers for the dancing chorus. Other principals featured in "Whoopee" are William Hain, Roy Gordon, Charles E. Galagher, Earle MacVeigh, Al Downing and Victor Casmore.

The story is based on Owen Davis' farce, "The Nervous Wreck." William Anthony McGuire, who wrote "Rosalie," "Kid Boots," and "Three Musketeers," adapted the musical version. The score, including the song hits, "Red Red Rose," "Love Me or Leave Me," "Girl of My Heart" and "Making Whoopee," was composed by Walter Donaldson. Gus Kahn wrote the lyrics.

Aided in Original Production.

"Whoopee" will be under the direction of Zeke Colvan, general stage director, who aided Ziegfeld in directing the original production, which was originally offered in 1928 at New York, where it ran for a year. The play is in two acts and seven scenes. The settings are laid near Mission Rest, Cal., and the Mojave Indian reservation. Raymond Sovey, scenic director, designed the scenery. The orchestra will be under the direction of John McManus.

The Municipal Theater Association announced today that good seats at all prices are available for all performances of "Whoopee." Tickets may be purchased at the downtown box office daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., or at the ticket office at the lower entrance of the Municipal Theater in Forest Park nightly after 7 o'clock.

PREMIER LAVAL'S DAUGHTER MARRIES

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Mlle. Marie Jose Laval, daughter of the Premier, was married to Count Rene Aldebert de Chambrun in a civil ceremony today, and by that action became a citizen of the United States.

Count de Chambrun, a nephew of the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth, holds not only French but American citizenship under an old United States law which confers that honor on all descendants of Gen. Lafayette, of whom he is one.

Under the French law, a wife follows her husband's citizenship, so that both now are citizens of two countries.

The ceremony was performed in the Sixteenth Ward City Hall, guarded by two lines of police who held the public back while the 100 invited guests entered. The religious ceremony will be celebrated tomorrow in the little Church of Sainte Clothilde.

Premier Laval was smiling as he came to the City Hall, although he had just left his office, where the Franco-British-Italian negotiations for peace in Ethiopia had broken up.

Contrary to what had been rumored, no dowry was given the bride by her parents.

Among the guests were Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Count Charles de Chambrun, the French Ambassador to Italy and brother of the bridegroom, and numerous family and political friends.

The two families of the 28-year-old bridegroom and the 23-year-old bride, the witnesses, and a few of their close friends went to a wedding luncheon in the Premier's apartment in the Foreign Office.

Count de Chambrun, a member of the New York and Paris bars, is just starting his law practice in the French capital. His mother is the former Clara Longworth of Cincinnati and his father won distinction as commander of colonial troops in North Africa prior to his retirement a year ago.

Mlle. Laval, familiarly called "Josette," has interested herself in her father's official affairs, often accompanying him on diplomatic journeys as his secretary. She visited the United States in 1931 when the Premier conferred with former President Hoover.

The French Federation for Large Families expressed the hope the marriage would result in many children.

GRAIN PRICES RANGE LOWER AT WEEK'S START

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 19.—Wheat was marked down a full cent and corn ¾ at the close of market today. The market was influenced by the action of Chicago.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@½c higher and early was ⅛c lower to ⅛c up. The close was ¼c higher to ⅝c lower.

Liverpool wheat came ½@⅝d higher in one cable after unchanged to ⅜d higher start. The close was ⅝d net higher.

ERRATIC COURSE TO GRAIN AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Wheat prices fluctuated erratically today, bobbing above and below Saturday's closing figures with the swell and ebb of buying power.

Buying associated with the firm closing of Liverpool wheat values caused a rally here around noon, but subsequently liquidation followed release of figures showing a liberal increase of 6,127,000 bushels in the domestic visible supply.

A small dip in rye following the opening carried December and May rye to new lows for the season. The lower trend, however, was checked at small fractions under Saturday's close, with prices firming with wheat.

At the close wheat was ½ to 1 cent below Saturday's finish, December 87⅝@¾c, and corn was ⅝@1⅜c off, December 55@⅛c. Oats was ¼@⅜ higher, rye ¼ off and barley unchanged to ½ down. Lard futures broke 45 to 50 cents.

Moderate commission-house selling forced wheat prices lower early today.

Bears asserted that possibility of continued importation of high-quality grain from Canada acted as a ceiling on the domestic market. Opening ⅜ off to ⅝ higher, December 88½@⅝, wheat later dropped below the previous close. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ down, December 56@56⅛, and then fell further.

Opening firmness in the wheat market reflected strength in stocks and wheat at Liverpool where, cables said, buying was attributed to the tense political situation after reports that Argentine rains has been insufficient.

Wheat soon dropped more than a cent a bushel, however, partly in sympathy with persistent weakness in corn. Hedging sales were in evidence. Good support appeared on the decline, however, and rallies to around Saturday's close occurred at times. Buying was not aggressive.

Precipitation in parts of the corn belt, although believed to be largely local, was reported to have given at least temporarily relief to corn suffering from hot, dry weather. Corn lost more than a cent at one stage, but oats held relatively steady.

Nearby lard deliveries again plunged the full 50 cents limit permitted in one day despite higher hog prices. Profit-taking accompanied the break.

Wheat futures purchases Saturday totaled 19,670,000 bushels, corn 7,020,000. Open interest in wheat was 101,474,000 bushels, and in corn 29,381,000.

FAVORITES OF RECENT DAYS MEET SALES FOR PROFITS

Stock List Closes Heavy—Steel Production Rate Is Up a Shade to Best Level Since February— Copper Rises to 8 1-2c.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Profit taking pressure on the utilities and rails unsettled today's stock market after early demand had pushed coppers, steels and aircrafts to new year's highs.

Losses ranged from fractions to two or more points and the closing tone was heavy. Transfers approximated 2,100,000 shares.

Passage by the House of the Guffey coal stabilization bill, and indications that other measures with which financial circles are not in sympathy will be rushed through Congress, did not help. In addition, most analysts felt that a technical correction, in view of the list's recent advance, had been overdue.

On the constructive side of the ledger, however, was the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute that current mill operations are at the rate of 48.8 per cent of capacity, up .7 of a point to the best level since the week of Feb. 18 last.

The majority of commodities sagged, including wheat and corn. Cotton was fairly steady. Low-priced bonds backed water. Sterling improved in foreign exchange dealings.

Selling of stocks was heaviest in the final hour and the ticker tape fell several minutes behind floor transactions. The pace slowed down just before the finish and mild support was accorded a number of shares. Many of the morning's bullish performers virtually canceled their gains.

Auburn Automobile got up about 2 points and Anaconda, Kennecott, Du Pont, American Tobacco "B," U. S. Steel preferred, Douglas Aircraft and United Aircraft were unchanged to slightly higher.

Union Pacific lost 3 points, and issues down major fractions to 2 included Chrysler, General Motors, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, Standard Gas, American Water Works, Columbia Gas, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Delaware & Hudson, Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck.

Wheat ended ½@1 cents a bushel lower and corn was off ⅝@1⅜c. Oats firmed ¼@⅝c and rye and barley were about unchanged. At Winnipeg wheat was a bit easier. Cotton closed 15 cents a bale higher at 20 cents lower.

In late transactions sterling was up ¾ of a cent at $4.97⅞ and the French franc was .00⅜ of a cent up at 6.63¾ cents. Belgas were .01 of a cent firmer, but Swiss francs were unchanged and guilders lost .10 of a cent. Canadian dollars were 1-32 of a cent improved at 99¾ cents.

News of the Day.

Domestic copper was sod at an advance of one-half cent a pound over the price prevailing for the past several months and zinc was raised one-tenth of a cent a pound. Export copper was also higher. Buying in the aviation group was attributed partly to European war talk. Du Pont came to life when the company increased the regular dividend and declared an "extra."

Petroleum shares attracted attention as it was learned that two engineers were preparing a prediction for the forthcoming meeting of the American Chemical Society that the United States would experience a real shortage of oil supplies within the next eight years with consequent higher prices.

Over Week-End Developments.

The report of the magazine "Steel" received attention. Significance was attached to the statement that automobile makers had placed heavy specifications with instructions to roll the material and hold it ready for release as soon as needed for new models.

The fact that implement makers have started the fall season five to six weeks ahead of the usual period was seen as symptomatic of better sentiment in this section of trade.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES 3 HIGHER TO 4 LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—An early decline in response to easy cables and the absence of a crop loan announcement over the week-end was followed by rallies on trade buying and covering in cotton today.

Oct. sold up from 11.26 to 11.40 with the market in the late trading about net unchanged to 10 points lower.

Futures closed steady, 3 higher to 4 lower. Oct. 11.42; Dec. 11.24-25; Jan. 11.19; March 11.15; May 11.14; July 11.08. Spot steady; middling 11.80.

October opened 11.27; Dec., 11.12; Jan., 11.09; Mar., 11.01; May, 11.04; July, 11.

Trading was moderately active at the opening. Easy Liverpool cables were followed by some southern selling as well as scattered liquidation and hedging from the South. These offerings were well absorbed, however, and prices held fairly steady at the end of the first hour when active months ruled 8 to 13 points net lower.

After selling off to 11.27 at the start, October rallied to 11.31 while May sold off to 11.03 with a resultant widening of the differences.

Fluctuations were irregular later in the morning. The market broke 10 or 12 points under increased selling following reports that the Department of Agriculture expected no loan announcement today. These reports were coupled, however, with a statement that some of the Southern Senators were looking for an early announcement and the market steadied up again later at mid-day. October was selling around 11.34c and May 11.04c, or about 5 to 11 points net lower.

STEEL PRODUCTION AT A NEW PEAK

Average of 48.8, Gain of .7 of a Point, Best Since Feb. 18.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Steel operations for the current week, as estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute, will average 48.8 per cent of capacity. This is the highest level reached in the industry since the week of Feb. 18, this year.

The gain over last week is .7 of 1 point. A month ago the schedule was 42.2 per cent, while at this time last year it was 21.3 per cent.

"STEEL'S" WEEKLY SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS IN INDUSTRY

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19. — Continuing to respond to increasing demands, steelworks operations last week advanced for the sixth consecutive week, the rate moving up 3 points to 51 per cent, states the magazine, "Steel."

"This was the first time steelworks operations crossed the 50 per cent line since the week of Feb. 16, when the rate was 53 per cent.

"Chicago, where a levelling-off in operations had been anticipated, experienced a fresh wave of buying, with the result operations in that district rose 4 points to 57 per cent. Pittsburgh, which had been holding at 41 per cent for several weeks, advanced 1 more point to 42 per cent. Youngstown was up 4 points to 55; Wheeling 5 to 84; Detroit 6 to 94; Eastern Pennsylvania 1 to 32½, New England 11 to 56. Cleveland declined 3 points to 59; Buffalo 3 to 34, while Birmingham held at 35½ per cent.

"One of the underlying reasons for this unusual bulge in August steelworks operations is the heavy specifications from automobile manufacturers, with instructions to roll the material and hold it ready for release as soon as needed for new models. About 25 per cent of fresh orders from the industry last week were for immediate shipment. Automobile production in the week increased to 53,686 from 48,067 in the preceding week.

COPPER MARKET ADVANCES; SALES REPORTED AT 8 1-2C

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Sales of copper have been made in the domestic markets at 8½ cents a pound, it was learned today, an advance of ½ cent over the price prevailing the past several months.

At the same time, it was learned, sales of the red metal abroad have been made at 8¼ cents a pound, cif European base ports, which represents a small fractional advance over levels prevailing at the end of last week.

A constant expansion of demand in the domestic market coincident with the sustained upturn in industrial activity, was believed in well informed quarters to have been responsible for the advance in the domestic price which has remained at 8 cents a pound over the past several months, or since the Blue Eagle price of 9 cents toppled shortly after the NRA was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Sales of copper abroad, which slumped slightly more than a month ago, have been on the mend noticably within the last few weeks and a further firming tendency in this market came as no surprise to metal quarters. War preparations of a number of European countries have called for an extensive amount of American copper.

Immediately after the advance in the domestic price was made public, General Cable Corp. advanced the price of copper rods, bare wire and magnet wire ½ cent a pound and weatherproof wire ⅜ of a cent. These immediate price schedules will be followed by markups in the price of all types of cable, officials of the company stated.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Uncertainty over the outcome of the Italo-Abyssinian situation subdued trading on the stock exchange today. There was a general marking down of prices in anticipation of selling which has not yet materialized. Italian bonds, gilt-edged securities and speculative issues are the ones which the continent is most interested in and should be most affected. Austrian bonds were quiet while Brazilian issues, tin shares and trans-Atlantics were steady exceptions. The closing tone was weak.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Munition stocks alone resisted the selling wave on the Bourse today, following the collapse of the Ethiopian conference. Rentes declined ½ a point and electric, bank, chemical and oil issues were lower. The market closed heavy.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Dr. Schacht's address depressed prices on the Boerse today which opened weaker. Share buying lessened and exchange rates relaxed.

PRESSURE ON THE BOND MARKET LATE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The bond market was under some pressure in the late trading, closing generally lower as a result of fairly active selling in low priced issues. Rails were weakest at the finish, although utilities accompanied the carriers on the downward way during the final hour. Legislative developments at Washington were associated with the selling, it was said.

The industrial division had a few weak spots, but for the most part this section held steady. Most of the high grade corporate issues met support and U. S. Governments were a bit reactionary at the end with prices 3-32ds of a point higher.

DRYGOODS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cotton goods were firm Monday with trading moderate. Sales last week in print cloths and sheetings were substantially in excess of output. Silk fabrics and yarns were advanced in keeping with the sharp rise in raw silk. Silk hosiery manufacturers were buying yarns more freely. Rayon mills were active with a substantial part of the September production already engaged. Wide sheetings were advanced 5 per cent. Wool goods were firm. Buyers took in all shipments due. Burlaps were steady in the local markets.

WOMEN ASK WALLACE FOR PACKING INQUIRY

He Tells Detroit Delegation Way to Reduce Prices Is to Produce More Meat.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told a delegation of housewives representing Detroit meat strikers today that the only way to bring about lower prices was to produce more meat.

Led by Mrs. Mary Zuk, the delegation asked Wallace to investigate the packing industry at Detroit immediately. A reduction of 20 per cent in the price of all meats was another of their demands.

Wallace replied that present prices resulted from last year's drouth. He said the AAA now was attempting only to get a fair price for the farmers and provide sufficient food for consumers.

The Secretary said he understood that an attempt was being made to obtain a congressional investigation of the packing industry.

Dissatisfied with his statement, Mrs. Zuk declared if prices are not reduced "we're going to strike until the packers do come down and lose everything they have."

The delegation went from the AAA to the White House. Mrs. Zuk said they planned also to visit Representative Cannon (Dem.), Missouri, to protest against a statement attributed to him, saying meat packers had sponsored the strike.

Statement on Strike.

The delegation represented housewives who have closed many Detroit butcher shops by strikes in recent weeks. Mrs. Zuk said the delegation was elected at a meeting of 7000.

"The meat strike in Detroit," the statement said, "is a result of widespread discontent with the high cost of living.

"Upon visiting the local representatives of the big packers, we were told that the Government was responsible for the high prices and not the packers.

Both Responsible.

"We say that both the Government and the packers are responsible. The Government, on the one hand, destroyed millions of head of cattle, introduced the processing tax and refused to aid the farmers during the drouth, compelling them to sell their cattle for practically nothing.

"The money raised through the processing tax, and which was supposed to help the farmers, was gobbled by the bankers, loaners and mortgage holders.

"The packers, on the other hand, encouraged by the Government policies, boosted the prices sky-high.

"The increase in profits for the last year is classic evidence. Confining ourselves to the three major companies, we see an increase of practically a million dollars in each case.

List of Demands.

"Because we can no longer endure the high cost of living, we demand the following:

"An immediate investigation of the packers, to be held in Detroit and ended in two weeks.

"The prosecution of the packers for profiteering, especially so now, when prices were raised in order to intimidate the Detroit populace.

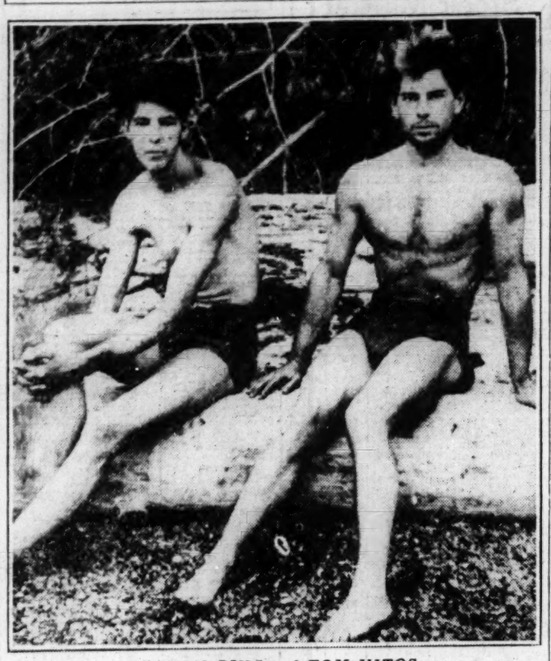

"A 20 per cent reduction on all meats as of July 15, 1935."

The statement presented to the AAA said Government statistics show the cost of living in Detroit was "higher than in any other city in the United States."

"At the same time, wages in our city are very low," it declared. "Thousands are unemployed. Because of these intolerable conditions, the women in Detroit are demanding a 20 per cent reduction on meat prices."

With Mrs. Zuk were Mrs. Pearl Alterman, Mrs. Catherine Mudra, Mrs. Elizabeth Moss and Mrs. Irene Thompson, a Negro.

Prayers and Songs Acted Out at St. Paul's Cathedral; Fourteen Nations Represented.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—One of the strangest and most touching services ever held under the mighty dome of St. Paul's Cathedral yesterday saw 700 deaf and dumb persons from 14 nations pray and sing without a sound being heard. They were attending the fourth international games for the deaf and mute beginning tomorrow.

Because many nationalities were involved, the service was conducted in the international sign language.

One after the other, chaplains and missionaries, some of them also deaf, mounted the lofty pulpit and voicelessly acted out the prayers. Hymns and songs with eloquent looks and gestures. Then the congregation joined in prayers and hymns.

Funeral of Sigmund Reinfeld.

Funeral services for Sigmund Reinfeld, theatrical booking agent, who died yesterday of a heart ailment, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow from the Berger Chapel, 4715 McPherson avenue, to Mount Olive Cemetery. He was 55 years old. Surviving are two sisters, Miss Celia Reinfeld and Mrs. Albert Manheimer.

NEGRO WATCHMAN SHOOTS MAN IN FIGHT

Fires Pistol in Struggle With Prowler Arrested in Tavern.

Clarence Leland Henry, an unemployed roofer, was shot through the abdomen and seriously wounded early yesterday when he grappled with Colonel Mays, Negro private watchman, who had arrested him in a tavern at 2901 Cass avenue after finding glass broken out of the front door.

Mays, wearing a watchman's cap and badge, observed a man peering in the front window at 2:30 a. m. The man walked away rapidly but Mays overtook him and marched him back to the tavern, where he noticed the broken glass. The man said he was Elmer Kramer, a laborer, 2415 Bacon street.

Inside the tavern, Mays said, he found Henry, crouching behind the bar. He took both men to a patrol box at Cass and Garrison avenues and telephoned police of the Dayton Street District. Just as he closed the box, he continued, Henry hit him in the chest and knocked him down.

As he rose, he said, Henry grappled with him, reaching for his revolver. He fired two shots, he went on, after he warned Henry to quit, but Henry persisted in the struggle.

In the tavern police found the cash box taken out of a peanut vending machine and pennies strewn over the bar. Another vending machine had been removed and placed near the front door. The proprietor, William Harrison, said about $1 in change was missing from the cash register.

Henry, taken to City Hospital, gave his address as 2609 Madison street, but made no statement.

Kramer, however, corroborated the watchman's account of the assault and shooting, according to police. He told police he met Henry and a third man in a saloon and drank beer there until the place was closed at 1:30 a. m. They went to several other places, which were also closed, he continued, and then stopped in front of the tavern at 2901 Cass.

With the remark, "We'll get some beer or something else," Henry picked up a brick and threw it through the door glass, Kramer told police. Henry and the third man went in, he said, and he waited outside. Police obtained the name and address of the third man.

Man Killed in Fire at Resort.

NILES, Mich., Aug. 19.—Henry L. Heckell of New Orleans was burned to death and six other persons narrowly escaped when fire destroyed two summer cottages at Barron Lake here early today. Robert Alvaredo, also of New Orleans, was burned on the face in a futile effort to rescue Heckell, a fellow member of an orchestra playing at a casino here. John Nye, Anderson, Ind., and Wayne D. Fawley, Fort Wayne, Ind., also musicians, were unhurt. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Moorman of Bloomington, Ind., escaped uninjured when the flames spread to their cabin.

SEVERAL AGENCIES TO SPEND U.S. FUNDS ALLOTTED TO STATE

Among Them Are PWA, War Department, Geodetic Survey, Forestry Service and WPA.

Funds allocated to Missouri from the $4,800,000,000 work relief appropriation will be spent through a number of Federal agencies rather than any one agency, Robert K. Ryland, Missouri director for the National Emergency Council, announced today. Ryland said he wished to correct an erroneous impression among many local officials that one agency would direct all expenditures.

Amounts allotted to Missouri will be spent through such agencies as the War Department, Soil Conservation Service, Emergency Conservation Work, Public Works Administration, Treasury Department, Geodetic Survey, Bureau of Public Roads, Forestry Service and Works Progress Administration, Ryland said.

While 90 per cent of the labor for the projects must be taken from among employables on relief rolls, the varied character of the works undoubtedly will assure employment also of other unemployed, even though they have not yet had to resort to direct relief, Ryland said.

A Rogers Highway.
City on a Gold Mine.
Farm Homes.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
(Copyright, 1935.)

FROM Tulsa, Ok., the State in which Will Rogers was born, J. D. Underwood telegraphs suggesting as "the highest tribute and a lasting memorial to Will Rogers," that Highway 66, which runs through Claremore, Ok., be named "Will Rogers Highway."

If every American highway, with friends of Will Rogers living on both sides from one end to the other, were named for him, there would be many "Will Rogers" highways.

You read "Borah prepares to enter 1936 presidential race if his Republican boom grows," and ask yourself what has become of the Young Republicans? Senator Borah is in the prime of intellectual power, the one whom many intelligent Americans would select, if a change were to come in 1936. A plain American, of the vanishing kind, he believes that the people could rule, if they had a chance, and attaches more importance to the American man than to the American dollar. Under ordinary circumstances that would prevent his nomination by the corporation-Republican party.

But these are not ordinary circumstances.

At Sverdlovsk, Russian Government engineers digging sewers under the city, find gold ore that indicates a rich gold field underlying the town. The Government owns practically all the city and can easily take the rest, and a further increase in Russia's gold production, already more than three times as great as that of the United States, may be expected.

American engineers could show them how to take out the gold, without knocking down the city.

Judge Otis, of the Federal District Court of Western Missouri, compelled by law to sell at auction homes and land of farmers who could not pay their debts, not to be intimidated by demonstrations, spoke in public to farmers and others.

This shows the right spirit. A judge is chosen to apply the law, until the people, with their ballots change it.

Nevertheless, having the roof sold over his head, and his farm under his feet, after he has spent a life working to pay for the house and to own and build up the farm, to realize that he has only succeeded in building up railroads, commission merchants, long strings of middle men, and banks, the farmer is puzzled. He could hardly be expected to have a really submissive, friendly feeling when business-like gentlemen with pencils and pads of paper arrive saying: "The time has come. Get out."

It seems too much like the experience of the gentleman sitting in a condemned cell.

Chief Walter Kulmalo, head of the Amakolwa tribe, offers to take a crowd of Zulus to help Ethiopia beat Mussolini. Too bad that Walter, who may call himself chief of the tribe of Amakolwas only by the grace of Britain, was not around when the pious English took Zululand from his ancestors and sent the great Zulu King, Cetewayo, to captivity.

Curious, by the way, that the British see no resemblance between Italy taking Ethiopia, because Italy wants Ethiopia, and England, formerly taking Zululand, because England wanted Zululand.

Mussolini asks the French to observe that wild, uncontrollable tribes of Ethiopia have invaded French Somaliland, killing 100 French subjects. France will pay no attention.

When you want war, it is enough for the enemy to kill a guinea pig, on your land. When you don't want war, killing a hundred men means little. In this instance, France will feel like the Negro gentleman who refrained from entering the war "to make the world save for democracy." He said: "The German Kaiser never done nothing to me, and if he did, I forgive him."

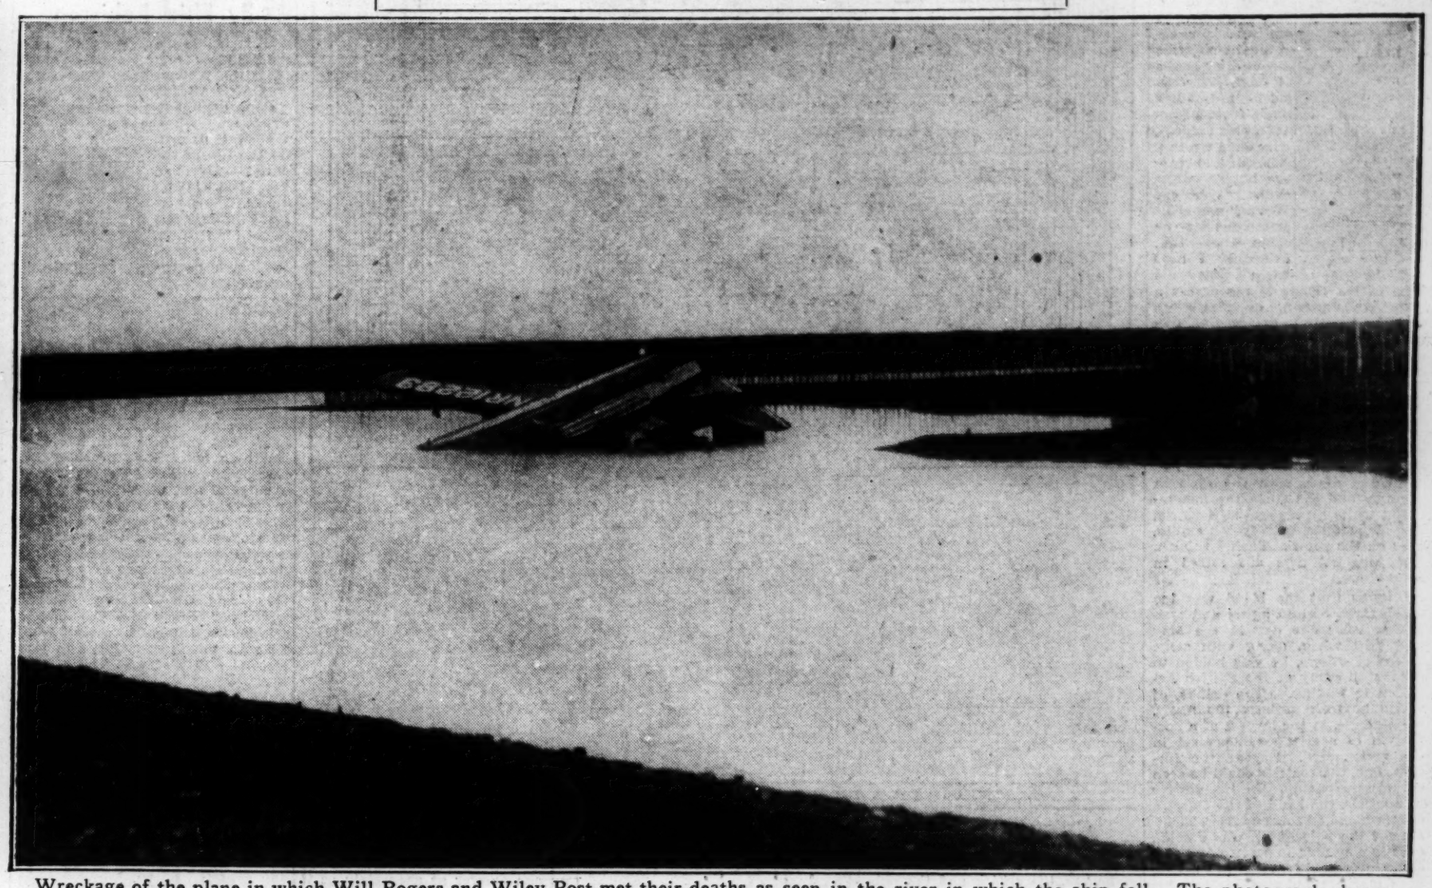

With the gathering of scientists from 30 nations in Moscow, Russian professors have demonstrated the fact that Sovietism has intelligence enough to feed and encourage science, as it does literature. The richest man in Russia is Gorky, the writer. Visiting scientists from the United States and other civilized countries compliment Russia on its admirable laboratories. Walter Duranty, who writes from Moscow, thinks some undeserved emphasis has been put on the achievements of modern Russian science. He says, while "Soviet interest in science is wholly true, a Russian engineer can run American engineers ragged in theoretical argument, but an American could make a train go while the Russian is making a plan."

REUNION IN NEWARK

By Alexander Woollcott

IT IS a commonplace that nothing can so poignantly evoke the flavor of the receding past as some remembered tune, some melody that has caught up and woven into its own unconscious fabric the very color and fragrance of a day gone by. I am sure, for example, that this Juventino Rosas (I have just copied his unfamiliar name from a phonograph record), who once wrote a pleasant and rather hoppy waltz called "Over the Waves," would be astounded if he could know that overtones I hear when that old tune of his comes to me across a lake at sundown, or floats up through the darkness from a distant orchestra. I myself could not detect all its associations, but first among them is certainly the heartbreaking gayety in the third act of The Cherry Orchard. Then there are the peanut-strewn paths at Willow Grove with Sousa's band playing of a Sunday afternoon long ago. And of course every prom of my salad days, with the girls in organdy and the stage-line miserable in white gloves and stiff shirts, and chaperones, with frozen smiles, ever on the prowl. Then I think a few jugglers' acts are mixed in somewhere.

Alexander Woollcott

I know that the blend was too much for a certain aging and mellow traveler one day in the May just past when, along with some scores of others, he was bidden to a cocktail party at the British Legation in Peking. The drinks, of which he took perhaps too many, were served in the largest of a succession of scarlet pavilions set in the greensward. Beyond the furthest one, the sentries could be seen ceaselessly pacing. In the shelter of another, the band of the Queen's Own, which had come up from Tientsin for the polo game, was staying over to play for the party. And just as the aforesaid traveler was taking his departure and stepping into his apprehensive rickshaw, the band struck up the familiar opening bars of "Over the Waves," and its melody followed him through the streets of the Legation Quarter. Whereupon the traveler began to weep in a quiet way. Perhaps it was just as well that the already sufficiently puzzled rickshaw boy understood no word of English, for it would have been difficult to explain to him (or to anyone else, for that matter) what the old fool was crying about.

To anyone "sufficiently decayed," such an evocation of a bygone day is tinged with a sadness inexplicable to the young fry. One might warn them, however, that they will live to learn that all music is full of such mischief. But, as it happens, I never realized until one Wednesday afternoon early in the present month when, to my considerable surprise, I found myself in Newark, that there are other sounds which can come across the years as sweetly freighted with associations numberless and indefinable. For, sitting as one unresisting spectator in the largest audience I have seen in any theater in many a season, I found myself yielding to the spell of a music familiar, dear, and ineffably touching. It was the music of a speaking voice I had not heard in years nor ever thought to hear once more. It was the voice—unchanged and changeless—of Maude Adams. And the sound of it filled me with an almost intolerable nostaglia for a day that is not now and never can be again. I was under the distinct impression that the play was "The Merchant of Venice" and that the admirable Shylock was Otis Skinner—the same Shylock (and wearing, by the way, the selfsame cloak) that I had seen with Ada Rehan eight-and-twenty years before from a hard-earned seat in the gallery of the Garrick in Philadelphia. Then I knew, too, that Miss Adams was supposed to be Portia, but I kept hearing the glee of Babbie laughing through the rowan berries at the little minister and once—I think through some lovely intonation in the "Quality of Mercy" speech—I suddenly saw not Portia at all, but Peter standing white, wraithlike, and consecrate, on guard outside the house they built for Wendy.

"I have no quarrel with the young reviewers who went all the way out to Cleveland to discover that Maude Adams was not a young and lustrous Portia, and am only a little amused at their implication that she ever would have been. For even when she was a youngster, she was a timeless gnome, and there never was a day when she could have played Portia to a good press. After all she was never considered a great actress in the sense that Ada Rehan and Mrs. Fiske were great. Another adjective described her more happily and still does describe her unmistakably and more nearly than any other player of my time. That adjective was "dear." Also am I a little amused at the recurrent observation that the selection of this particular play for her return was "ill-advised." If there is one thing I am sure of, it is that it was not advised at all. For she was ever a person apart, and long ago she learned to shut herself, such as she was, away from the distracting sounds of the managers, the critics, and the public. I am glad of that for only such a one could, in 1905, have saved the newborn Peter Pan from being the dire failure which the managers, the critics, and the public at first so confidently regarded it.

The audience in Newark was made up of gaffers and school children. For instance, I was not unaware of several comely minxes but recently arrived in their teens who were sitting just behind me. When we came to the moon-drenched loveliness of the final scene and heard from Lorenzo how the floor of heaven was thick inlaid with patines of bright gold, the young females behind me giggled. I realized that, to them, bred at the movies, this scene was just a couple young people in funny clothes necking in a garden. And right they were, I suppose. But beyond them stretched an acre or so of gray heads, and at some familiar gesture of this Portia, or at some fondly remembered caress of the funny, throaty little voice, which ever defeated the mimics of its day, a ripple ran across that audience as a gust of wind traverses a field of grain—a ripple that was part sigh and part contented chuckle and, to my notion, most pleasant to hear.

Peanut Macaroons

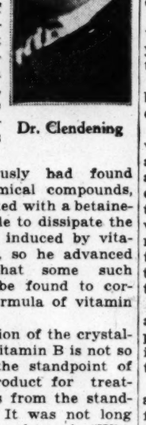

A surprise in that same picnic basket. Beat one egg white until stiff and gradually beat in five tablespoons finely chopped peanuts, one-quarter cup granulated sugar and one teaspoon vanilla extract. Drop by spoonsful onto buttered tins, allowing room to spread. Press into each one a candied cherry. Bake in a slow oven from 12 to 15 minutes.

For grease and oil stains use French chalk and blotting paper.

Relationship Between Diet And Neuritis

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A CORRESPONDENT, P. E. F., writes: "A newspaper of June announced the segregation of pure vitamin B in crystal form. Early experiments seem to show that this substance has great value in the treatment of neuritis. It was reported to the American Medical Association by Dr. M. G. Vorhaus and others of Columbia University and New York City.

Dr. Clendening

"As some of your recent articles have dealt with the relationship between diet and neuritis, can you tell me whether crystalline vitamin B is available?"

Williams previously had found that certain chemical compounds, intimately connected with a betaine-like ring, were able to dissipate the neuritis of fowls, induced by vitamin B deficiency, so he advanced the hypothesis that some such structure would be found to correspond to the formula of vitamin B.

The demonstration of the crystalline structure of vitamin B is not so important from the standpoint of having a pure product for treatment purposes, as from the standpoint of theory. It was not long ago that scoffers used to ask, "Who knows what the vitamins are?" Now we can answer as accurately as if we told someone water is H2O.

Vitamin B in its natural state is perfectly capable of correcting any conditions caused by its deficiency in the diet.

Answering another correspondent, B. M., who wants to know what foods contain vitamin B, it is very widely distributed in plant and animal materials commonly used as food. Milk is one, and I know of no report that indicates that milk has ever been found deficient in vitamin B. Yeast is another, although less rich than wheat; rice and cereals so long as they are unmilled or unprocessed. In other words, so long as their outer shell remains on.

In the case of wheat flour, this outer shell is removed in milling to make white flour, but whole wheat, and hence whole wheat bread, contains the vitamin. Bran, which is simply the shell of the wheat removed in milling, contains it in concentrated form.

White bread, however, has the vitamin B readded to it in the yeast; and if prepared with milk this adds more.

Vitamin B is destroyed by heat, but not by the amount of heat produced by ordinary cooking.

The question has arisen whether we get an adequate amount of vitamin B in our average diet. It has appeared in experiments, where the concentrated vitamin was added to the diet, that the people to whom it was fed only realized their subnormal state of health by contrast with the improvement which followed the use of a higher vitamin B content.

One result of low vitamin B amounts in the diet is impaired appetite. In animals and humans this is corrected by vitamin B concentrates.

But only when the diet contains a preponderance of artificially refined food is there likely to be a real vitamin B deficiency in the diet.

A Full Life in The Present Is Important

It Is Hard to Pass Up Tomorrow and Yesterday for Today.

By Elsie Robinson

(Copyright, 1935.)

THE most tragic picture on earth is the Woman Who Was—AND CAN'T GET OVER IT.

Once upon a time she was The Prettiest. Or the smartest. Or the best dancer.

Or the life of the party. Or had the loveliest hands. Or—a perfectly marvelous talent for writing. Or had married the catch of the town.

Elsie Robinson

So now—what? Now nothing. She just can't forget it, that's all.

Why not? Is she sick, poor, homeless or friendless? Has her husband left her? Did the boss kick her out? Anything but. She's probably sitting pretty, with all the making of a cheerful and useful career. But in spite of that she's miserable. Ab-so-loot-lee mis-er-rubble. And nothing in all the world matters but that glorious, glamourous once-upon-a-time which is now no more.

But why should only that matter? And why is she now so wretched? She'll give you endless reasons—a hard-luck story from here to the moon. But the real reason is—SHE JUST CAN'T TAKE IT.

For one glorious moment, when life was new and easy, she had everything she wanted without much effort. And now? Now things are hard. She's got to run risks, face competition, stand criticism and do all the other grown-up things that grown-up people do. And she doesn't like it. It hurts her vanity, prods her laziness, raises Cain with her selfishness and conceit. So what?

So she tries to run away. Where? INTO YESTERDAY. Into once-upon-a-time. And, of course, she can't do it. But she does her darndest. She sits moping around, being sorry for herself, REMEMBERING WHEN.

The Woman Who Was—there's one side of the picture. But glory be, there's also another! And if you'd like to see it operating in the flesh, stroll into a certain smart little dress shop one of these days and ask for Gertrude Ederle.

Remember Gertrude? Probably not—but nine years ago you cheered whenever her name was mentioned. And with plenty of reason! For Gertrude had just done one of the pluckiest things in female history—swum the icy waters of the English Channel in 14 hours, the first of her sex to lick that deadly riptide. And what a whoopla it created! New York went mad—never was there such a confetti carnival as when Gertie came laughing home!

Nine years ago. And now? Now Gertrude Ederle's fat and—forgotten. But is she wasting any tears about it? Has she joined the Remember-When Racket? She isn't and hasn't. She has let 1929 flop along with the calendar, where it belongs, AND SHE'S LIVING IN TODAY.

What's more, she is capitalizing those very things which would have thrown many another woman into a nail-chewing contest. That plump waist that debars her from the Splasherettes—is it Gertrude's Secret Sorrow? No, stranger, it's her MAIN ASSET! She's actually turning it into chuckles and checks by DESIGNING DRESSES FOR ALL THE STYLISH STOUTS!

Compared to which, crossing that English Channel was just a pitty-pat game. For the hardest stunt in all the world to do is—LIVE IN TODAY. And the human being who can pass up tomorrow, forget yesterday and TACKLE THE PRESENT has all the other champs skinned!

Which is certainly some sort of a needful lesson to a lot of crybabies I know—including MYSELF.

THE MARCH OF FASHION

By Sylvia Stiles

DARK colored dinner and evening frocks have been mingling with those of white or pastel tints at the popular hotel and club dancing spots during the past week. These illustrate the determination of many young women to transfer their interest from summer to early fall frocks not later than the middle of August. Black has been worn by several well-dressed dancers, the preference usually being a sheer fabric. Brown also has been worn in several attractive versions.

A dinner type of frock of sheer black fabric shot with cellophane was worn by Miss Marjorie E. Selby while dancing at a country club. This had a jacket over a moderately low-cut bodice, the jacket supplying an informal note. The bodice was cut with a bertha collar patterned after the popular sailor. This was sufficiently wide to cover the shoulders. The jacket was a fitted one designed along basque lines and the collar of the dress was worn outside it. Sleeves of the jacket were quite full, being caught into tight bands at the wrists. The skirt was fitted by means of many gores which also provided the smart hemline fullness. Miss Selby's sandals were of black crepe.

Another dancer who wore black effectively was Miss Ruth M. Tyler. Her frock was of black net patterned with square white designs and was fashioned in the shirtwaist manner. Sleeves were long and quite full, the fullness being shirred at the shoulders and gathered into tight cuffs at the wrists. Rhinestone cuff links held the cuffs tightly in place. Matching shirt studs with rhinestone settings adorned the front of the blouse. The skirt was molded to the figure with some fullness released below the knees. A black taffeta slip added to the attractiveness of the frock.

Two shades of blue, one the favorite aqua tone and the other a deep voilet shade blended beautifully to create the becoming frock which Miss Margaret Warren had on recently at the roof dining room of the Hotel Statler. The fabric was aqua toned point d'esprit over a taffeta slip of the same shade. The square neckline of the bodice was outlined with a narrow binding of the violet shaded grosgrain ribbon while other bands of the ribbon held the short puffed sleeves above the elbows. The skirt was floor length and moulded to the figure. Circling the waistline was a wider band of grosgrain than was used on the sleeves. It tied in a flat tailored bow at the center front with streamer ends to the knees. A tiny cluster of field flowers was tucked into the bow. Miss Warren's sandals matched the tone of her dress.

White dotted organza was most becoming to Miss Janet Wendt, especially in its combination with aqua blue. The bodice featured a round neckline that was somewhat lower at the back than at the front, and very full puffed sleeves pushed up above the elbows. The skirt was fitted to the hips where gradual flares were provided by means of many godets. A sash of blue taffeta was tied at the side front with a large bow and streamers. Miss Wendt wore white sandals to complete her dancing costume.

A brown frock which brought out some of the interesting style points of the new dinner frocks was worn by Miss Florence Anne Turner at the roof garden of Hotel Chase. The fabric was brown taffeta combined with the moire in an exquisite tone of burnt orange. The neckline was square at the front and extended to a rather low V at the back. Tiny cap sleeves that stood out in butterfly fashion were lined with the moire. The skirt was tightly fitted to the knees where it flared to the floor. A facing of the moire at the hemline showed when Miss Turner danced and was most striking. A two-toned sash of the taffeta and moire completed a stunning color combination.

Marmalade Cheese Circles

Eighteen slices Graham bread, buttered
One-half cup cottage cheese
One-third cup orange marmalade
Two tablespoons cream
One-eighth teaspoon salt

Arrange bread in pairs. Spread with rest of ingredients. Arrange sandwich fashion and cut out circles, using cooky cutter.

Caviar Fingers

Eighteen strips toast
One-third cup caviar
Three tablespoons butter
Two tablespoons mayonnaise

Toast strips of bread two by one-half inches. Arrange on shallow pan and spread with rest of ingredients. Garnish with bits pimiento and green pepper.

Baked Corn

Two cups of green corn cut from the cob, one cup milk, one teaspoon sugar, one egg, one tablespoon butter, salt, pepper, paprika. Add the beaten egg and milk to the corn, then sugar and seasonings. Melt the butter and add and pour all into a buttered baking dish. Bake for a half hour in a moderate oven.

Apples will keep sound if packed in saw dust.

Coconut Cream Pie

One baked pie shell.
One-third cup sugar.
Four tablespoons flour.
Two egg yolks.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One and one-half cups milk.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One-fourth teaspoon lemon extract.

Blend sugar with flour, add yolks, salt and milk. Cook slowly until thick and creamy. Stir constantly. Add extracts and coconut and pour into pie shell. Cover with meringue, using:

Two egg whites.
Four tablespoons sugar.
One tablespoon coconut.

Beat whites until stiff, add sugar and beat until creamy. Roughly spread over filling. Sprinkle with coconut. Bake 10 minutes in slow oven.

Egg and Olive Sandwiches

Another little suggestion for the picnic basket. Press four hard boiled eggs through a ricer. Season with salt and pepper and blend with mayonnaise. Add two tablespoons stuffed olives. Mix well and spread with slices of buttered graham bread.

The over-night bag is just the place for those samples of talcum powder, tooth paste, etc.

Pets and Child To Appreciate Responsibility

Boys Should Be Old Enough to Gain Affection by Care.

By Angelo Patri

IT is fine to let children grow up among pets. Dog Fido is a great friend and his character, so loyal, patient and kind, is an education in itself. Puss is not so friendly, but her silky coat, her contented song at evening, her soft mannerly ways, her cleanliness set a pattern that small children may benefit by.

Angelo Patri

These household pets must be an adult responsibility. The dog must be fed properly. Table scraps tossed his way when somebody thinks of it will not rear a fine dog. His diet must be watched, his health guarded. He must be bathed and combed and brushed, his nails clipped, his coat trimmed. Otherwise he will not be the fine companion you need for your children and yourself.

Puss needs the same care. She must be combed and brushed and her coat kept free of fleas. She will attend to the bathing herself. But she, too, must have clean food and fresh water.

A little child cannot attend to this. It is an adult responsibility. The grownup takes care of the pets and the child has the privilege of associating with them, treating them gently. He must be trained to respect the household pets as he would respect any friend dependent upon him for courtesy and attention.

The dog belongs to the person who cares for him. He will follow him, obey him and adore him. The child owner must earn the affection of the pet by service. That means the child must be old enough to understand and to shoulder the responsibility of the animal's care.

Boys of 10 and 12 long for a dog. Some boys of that age are able to take charge of one and many are not. I have not found that an irresponsible boy becomes responsible the moment he gets a dog. He may feed him the first day or two, but after that he lets mother do it, or sister, anybody who wants to, and lays claim to the dog only when it pleases him to do so.

A good dog is a fine influence in the family. If a child wants to own one he must earn his right to him by taking responsibility for him. There again the dog is a fine force for character building. Only if the boy loves his dog well enough to treat him as he himself would like to be treated if he was dependent and helpless among strong and able people, can he hope to win the dog's loyalty.

Then, it is idle to give a dog to an infant. Infants should not own living things. Older children must be trained in the care of their pets, know what to give them to eat, how and when to serve them. They must be able to bathe and comb and brush and treat them when necessary. They have to establish a routine of care for their pets and never miss a time lest the helpless creature suffer hunger, thirst or neglect of any sort.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 17.

WARNERS are digging down in the old bank roll for the production of "The Adventures of Robin Hood." Jack Warner in telling me of his plans for this famous story, said it will be a huge spectacle on the same scale as "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Green Pastures." In other words, a lavish production plus entertainment. James Cagney has been chosen for the role of "Robin Hood," which carried Douglas Fairbanks to the dizzy heights of fame a few years ago. That delightful actor, Guy Kibbee, will play Friar Tuck. Cagney should really be very good, too, as the adventurous and mischievous "Robin Hood," who steals that the poor may eat.

The Jock Whitney organization is moving to the United Artists lot immediately. The deal was settled in all its details by long-distance telephone, with Whitney in New York and Samuel Goldwyn out here. Pioneer Pictures will occupy the former quarters of Joseph Schenck.

Just one day before Will Rogers crashed in Alaska, Darryl Zanuck received a telegram from him with an assurance that the cowboy humorist would come back whenever he was needed for his next picture, "The Man From Home." Zanuck, who had often played polo with Rogers, queried him on the rumor that an agent in town was trying to get a new contract for him because he was unwilling to continue with the new company. A characteristic wire assured Darryl that Rogers would be back with him both for work and for polo.

Chatter.

I don't like to accuse Brian Aherne of having the wanderlust, but it just seems to me he never stays in any one place for any length of time. Everyone who knows him is sorry, for we like to have him in Hollywood. Brian is sailing almost immediately for Italy, where he will go on a walking tour. He has no pictures here until April, when he makes two for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has just completed "I Live My Life," starring Joan Crawford.

The oft-repeated rumor that Virginia Bruce and Jack Gilbert will be reconciled is again current in Hollywood. Virginia has always been in love with Jack and Jack with her, but Jack was so bitter and moody over his motion picture career while they were married they just couldn't get along. Now he has completely changed. He is exactly like the handsome, winning boy of a few years ago and, moreover, he is learning to meet his old friends, go to dinners with them and be his charming self again.

Tay Garnett better make sure that boat of his, which is to take him on a six months' jaunt, is seaworthy, because big things are awaiting him when he returns. He has just signed the most unusual director's contract in existence. It's a three-way agreement between him, Harry Cohn and Darryl Zanuck. Tay makes three pictures for Twentieth Century and three for Columbia, alternating at each of these two studios. He takes with him, on his trip, scripts from both producers, which he will read when he isn't fighting the waves and the storms at sea.

IF YOU ASK My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE been married 10 years and have a little girl 5. My husband is a laboring man and when he gets home at night is so very tired. We both do our share of hard work with never a day off, not even Sundays.

My husband says he loves me, but he wants me to go away for a week or so with my child. I feel as though he is pushing us, because we haven't even enough money to meet our bills. He says it is only that he feels I need a rest after being housekeeper and cook without a day in 10 years. Mrs. Carr, do you know of any place we could go? Of course I would try and pay something. I think the country where there are cows and chickens would be lovely, if there are some other mothers and children. We couldn't enjoy it if it were too lonesome.

My child has never been on a train. I would try to leave right away as my nerves seem to be cracking. MRS. S. L.

There are a number of summer camps where mothers may go and take their children for a short time. And, of course, there are any number of farmers and people near, in the Ozarks, who would be glad to take you for a little remuneration.

Call JEfferson 1470 and ask about Camp Huldina. This is a place where they take both mothers and children for a short time. They will tell you the terms.

The Good Will Industries Camp. Call CEntral 4555.

I do not think you should feel that your husband is pushing you off. On the contrary, he probably sees that you are in a nervous state which an outing of some kind and a change at this time would do you more good than medicine or rest at home. There will be a change for him, too, you must remember, in this slight change of routine. You will be glad to get home and he will be glad to have you after the little variation in your lives.

* * *

My dear Mrs. Carr:

MY friend and I would like to get instructions in tap dancing and the Argentine Tango and the Rhumba. We are both unemployed (ages 17 and 18), but would like to work for this instruction.

RAFT AND ASTAIRE.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

IN regard to the letter signed "An Old-Fashioned Girl": If she is as straight as she says she is, I'd say she is the "Ideal Girl." And any mug that could ask her to forgive and forget such treatment as she has experienced ought to be "bumped off" on sight.

I am in love with a fine girl; although according to the way I feel about it, she gets around too much. Still, I love this girl and she says she loves me and shows it in many ways. I know her family well, too. Do you think I have a right to ask her to go out with me, only? She is only 17 and I am 19. I would ask her to marry me and be only too glad to get her, only I think we are too young; besides that, I do not make so very much. We could get by, but it would be hard for a while, so I think I ought to wait a little longer. I would not like my wife to work. What do you think? STRAIGHT SIX.

I believe you would do well to give the girl a little freedom, since she is only 17 and might grow tired being tied too tight without first having had her own youthful fling. At the same time, I think you might intimate in some well chosen words that, while you were, for her good and the sake of future happiness, exercising some restraint and common sense, you hoped to be able to ask her some time to marry you.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WONDER if you could help me out on this. I went to a restaurant the other day and one of the vegetables served was beets. Now with these warm beets there was a wonderful sauce which was lightly thickened. I would like to know if you could tell me what made the pretty red color in this sauce. I tried red fruit coloring, but that didn't color right.

ANXIOUS.

Generally the juice from boiled beets is much colored. You need only to use this in a thickened sauce to make the dressing you speak of. Cook the juice with a little flour and butter stirred into it. Or try paprika.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

IN answer to the lady who has an electric refrigerator and whose ice cream gets icy, I should like to say that I've had one for three years and never have encountered this trouble, except right at the first. But I found out the trouble and am more than willing to pass the remedy on.

Always follow directions exactly, by seeing that all ice cream powder or sugar is dissolved thoroughly over a tiny flame, using a little milk or cream with this. After mixing, turn your lever to about 6 or 7 and stir at least three times the first hour or so of freezing, before it sets too hard. It always takes from five to eight hours to be good.

I always make ices or sherbets in hot weather; they are much more refreshing than ice cream and need no stirring whatever.

MRS. B. J. K.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

CAN you tell me if there is an old age pension in Arizona and how long one must be a resident of that State before they are eligible to draw a pensions?

INTERESTED.

Arizona has an old age pension law. For details write to State Legal Department, Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM ON relief and cannot do outside jobs because I spent several months in the T. B. camp at Mount Vernon. I was dismissed with an A. C., but my doctor prohibits my working in that way. I have a little boy five years old. We get very lonely housed in one housekeeping room with no income for any kind of outside amusements. I thought perhaps some of your readers might have a small radio (electric) that they are not using. It would mean so much to us.

I am leaving my name and references with you in the hope that someone will be kind enough to help make these hot days more pleasant by doing this kindness.

"PAT."

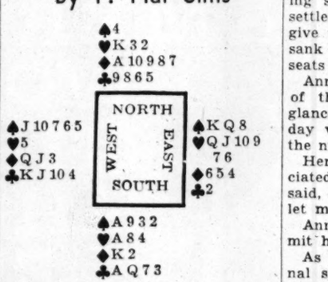

There are so many things, bits of work, that a woman can do with just a little spare time now, that I think it might be well for you to look over a list I have compiled for all-time and part-time occupations for women. You would be better satisfied to earn something by working a little at things that may suit you best and do not overtax you.

If you will send self-addressed, stamped envelope (which it is necessary for me to require now with the large volume of mail and requests sent in to me) I shall be glad to send this list to you.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply

Play of Hand In Contract With High Bid

By P. Hal Sims

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 Cl.	Pass	1 Di.	Pass
2 N. T.	Pass	3 Cl.	Pass
4 Cl.	Pass	5 Cl.	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Rdbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

SOME may wonder why East did not overcall. East was the same person who failed to overcall yesterday. He could be coaxed into the bidding only with difficulty. Once East had gone down six tricks at an overcall and he had never forgotten. It had left some sort of a sear across his soul.

South, on the other hand, was a bidder who could not be controlled once he got the bit in his teeth. His proper bid is one spade over one diamond and the proper contract is three clubs; but here was South, up to five and redoubled.

West could hardly restrain himself from doubling four clubs. Five, doubled and redoubled, was right down his alley. He opened the jack of spades, having heard that you should lead your longest suit when you have trump length. South won with the ace and ruffed a spade on the board. He re-entered his hand with the ace of hearts and ruffed yet another spade. He came back to his hand with the king of diamonds and trumped yet another spade on the board. When East failed to overruff, discarding an encouraging heart, South nodded sagely. It was just what he had suspected.

It seemed subsequently as if some higher power must have guided South, only West didn't put it exactly that way. At any rate, South played the ace of diamonds and trumped a third diamond in his hand. West, much to his own disgust, had to follow. A small heart was led. West leaped in and South trumped that in the dummy, trumped it, returning a spade, discarding a low heart from his own hand. The king of hearts was led. South trumped it low, and West, having nothing but trumps, was forced to overtrump and lead back into the ace, queen of clubs.

RADIO SWEETHEART

A New Serial By VIDA HURST

On a Rainy Night Anna Stahl Stepped Into an Occupied Taxicab and Into an Unusual Romance.

CHAPTER ONE.

IT was 5 o'clock in San Francisco and it was pouring rain. Straight sheets of water which fell in torrents rolled down shallow gutters and splashed pedestrians who attempted to cross the streets or board the crowded cars. People streamed from office buildings and stores, ducking under awnings, bobbing under umbrellas, spreading newspapers over their heads.

Anna Stahl, caught in the mob, which swirled from her own building, stared at the downpour in dismay. She had no umbrella. It was more than two blocks to her car line and there was not a vacant taxi in sight. No use to telephone for one, either. Taxicab telephone operators, ordinarily so obliging, became unbearably patronizing on a rainy day. Impossible during rush hours.

"This would happen the first time I wore my new hat and coat," the girl thought, pausing in the doorway.

Her big blue eyes scanned every passing taxi eagerly, but each had its shadowy occupant. Then, just as she had given up hope, one splattered into the parking space and stopped, headed diagonally into the curb, to discharge a passenger.

Seizing her opportunity, Anna made a dash for it. At the moment Anna hurried into the cab's shelter, the door was opened from the other side and someone else leaped inside. Their heads collided with a violence which made both draw back involuntarily.

"Oh!" gasped Anna.

"Sorry!" a man's voice cried. "I hope I haven't hurt you."

It was a rich, magnetic voice, although it was, also, rather annoyed, but at the moment Anna was interested in nothing but her rights.

"Where to?" the driver demanded impartially.

"If he is a gentleman, he will get out now," Anna thought, giving her address at the identical moment that the other passenger gave his.

Both frowned and remained where they were.

"I'm in a terrific rush," the man apologized, "and you know how difficult it is to get a taxi when it is raining. Would it be possible for me to drop you off where you are going? Or let you drop me?"

Anna said firmly, "I'm going to the Mariana, but if I can drop you along the way" . . .

"I'm only going to Van Ness," the man explained. "I'm due on the air in 20 minutes. That's why, if you don't mind." . . .

"Certainly not!" Anna said more graciously. He did have a reason for his hurry, then, she thought.

She had recognized the address he gave as her favorite broadcasting station and now that it was settled that neither of them should give up his right to the taxi they sank back on its damp, leather seats with mutual sighs of relief.

Anna at once became conscious of the man's frankly appraising glance and for the first time that day was glad that she had worn the new hat and coat.

Her companion evidently appreciated them, too, for presently he said, "It's awfully nice of you to let me share your taxi like this."

Anna smiled but did not commit herself.

As they paused for a traffic signal she saw that his eyes were dreamily dark. The eyes of an artist, she thought, wondering what part he might have in the radio programs she heard each day.

"He is the most interesting looking man I have ever seen," she decided, unconscious that the picture he was looking upon was equally attractive.

"Striking rather than beautiful!" he thought. "Big blue eyes in a sensitive, rather foreign looking face. Long narrow hands and feet and a gorgeous figure. Her sense of clothes is perfect. Her skin is smooth as velvet, but dark. Un-American background of some sort. But what? There is a vividness about her which appeals to the imagination, but she's too proud to make up with a man she has met so informally. She isn't even going to talk to me."

He had no sooner reached this conclusion than Anna said shyly, "I love San Francisco when it's raining. Don't you?"

"I love her under any circumstances," he responded. "Have you lived here long?"

"Ever since I was born," she confided.

"That's funny! I was guessing you were born across the sea somewhere."

"My parents were born in Russia," she admitted and again he was conscious of reserve closing about her like a shell.

* * *

"I'M Carey Dennison," he informed her. "You may have heard me sing."

Anna caught her breath.

"Carey Dennison," she repeated, thrilled. "I hear you sing on the radio nearly every night."

"That being the case we are more or less old acquaintances," he suggested.

Anna laughed.

"Perhaps we are if you put it like that! My name is Anna Stahl."

"Nice name!" he approved. "Are you by any chance a professional dancer?"

"No! Why?"

"You look like one."

"I'm just an ordinary working girl, Mr. Dennison—secretary to a lawyer."

"You must be a very satisfactory secretary," Carey said boldly.

"If I weren't, I probably shouldn't hold my position. Is that what you mean?"

"Not at all. I mean employers must dream of having a secretary that looks like a combination of a Russian dancer and a member of the nobility."

"Well, I'm neither," Anna replied—but she was pleased.

He said no more then and, suddenly, Anna found herself hoping that he would ask to see her again. She blushed as though the wish had been uttered aloud. For the first time in her life, she realized, she wanted a man to ask for her telephone number. But she should have known better than to expect such a celebrity as Carey Dennison to fall for a girl just because they had happened to share the same taxi. She told herself that, and knew it was true. But knowing didn't snuff out the hope that he might ask to see her again.

When the cab reached his destination, he paid the driver, lifted his hat long enough to murmur, "Thank you so much!" and was gone.

Was It Romance?

"Yes, Miss?" suggested the driver.

She repeated her address dreamily. Romance, swift and unexpected, had been riding with her the last few moments. Anna was amazed and astonished at the interest he had roused. If only he had felt the same way about her! But he hadn't. He probably would never think of her again. Even when he was broadcasting he would not remember that one of his audience might be the girl he had met that night in the rain.

The taxicab moved slowly. It was raining harder than ever. Pedestrians took their lives in their hands when they attempted to cross the traffic jammed streets. It seemed an endless time before they reached Bay street. Anna paid the driver and prepared to scurry inside. Looking up first to wave to the curly headed child who stood with her face flattened against the window. The door was open before Anna had reached the top of the steps. Her knees were seized in a tempestuous embrace.

"Anna, you naughty one! I thought you would never come."

"I thought so myself," Anna cried, kissing the child's warm cheek. "Where's Hazel?"

"In the kitchen making supper."

"Has papa come yet?"

"Not yet. But he telephoned that he was starting."

"Yes, Miss Anna! Cept'n that Tanya has most driven me wild."

"Has she been naughty?"

"I'll speak to her about it," Anna promised, going into her own room.

It was an attractive room, the only one in the flat which her stepmother had not furnished. As different from the others as the two women, who had been only 10 years apart in age. Connie had chosen white lamps, white flowers and white venetian shades for her blue and gold living room. The bedroom she had shared with her husband was modernistically gay in black and silver, with pile of frothy pillows on a lace bedspread lined with salmon pink.

* * *

WITH a gentle tenacity which wrung his daughter's heart, Peter Stahl had insisted on keeping this room just as Connie had left it when she deserted him. Hazel was not permitted to move one frivolous gewgaw from its accustomed place.

In contrast Anna's room seemed almost severely plain with its homemade dressing table, frilled in white dotted swiss with curtains to match. Beside the old-fashioned four poster bed was a table with a portrait of her mother. She had Anna's own features and a steadfast, resigned expression which had covered her heartache.

Life had not been easy for that young Russian girl who had left her own country as a bride never to return. As controlled as her husband was impulsive, Marie Stahl had been a woman of deep emotions, deliberately concealed. No one, least of all Peter himself, had guessed at the flame of passion which had consumed her; at the jealousy she had fought and conquered; at her frantic fears when she suspected that death was going to force her to leave him.

It was pouring rain outside. Inside the cab, which they were sharing by accident, Anna Stahl and Carey Dennison were conscious only of each other. Her meeting with this man had thrilled Anna as had no other. "I am Carey Dennison," he had said. "You may have heard me sing."

"Carey Dennison!" Anna repeated thrilled. "I hear you sing on the radio nearly every night."

There were traces of these things visible to the daughter who had been left on orphan at 15! In her own childish fashion Anna had understood her mother as her father hadn't and it had made the pain of his infatuation for Connie the more poignant, when two years later he had met her and been swept away by it.

But Anna, also, had learned to conceal her emotions. She had never liked Connie but she had not been rude to her and the older woman had been too absorbed in her own interests to pay more than a passing attention to the 17-year-old girl.

Peter Stahl, as naive as a child and more easily hurt, had refused to believe that Connie would not return to him. When she had declared herself "fed up" with everything Russian, including her husband, he had permitted her to obtain a divorce only on the condition that he should have complete custody of their child. He hoped that on this account, if no other, Connie would change her mind.

But Connie had married the Englishman who paid for her divorce in Reno. She had returned with him to his home in London and left Peter and Tanya on Anna's hands.

Of the two her father had been more of a care than a 2-year-old child. Bewildered and crushed, he had moved as if in a trance for months afterward. Anna had been compelled to decide everything. She had hired the colored maid who acted as nurse for Tanya and did the housework. It had been a struggle which two years later Anna still disliked to contemplate. But it was better now. Peter had managed to keep his position as an accountant and was gradually resuming his former interest in life.

Anna turned the water into the tub, discarded her clothes and slipped into the blessed comfort of a hot bath. She was rehearsing those brief moments in the damp taxicab. How quickly things could happen! An hour ago Carey Dennison had been only a rich, powerful voice over the radio. But from now on she would always think of him as a real person—the most fascinating man she had ever seen!

Her natural reserve and the worry at home had kept the 22-year-old girl from the friendships she should have been making at her age. Young men who had attempted to take her out had not appealed to her or had expected too much in return. Not one of them had roused even a fraction of the interest she felt in Carey Dennison. Perhaps it was his profession which made him seem so attractive. There is a lure about radioland and those connected with it.

* * *

YET Anna told herself that fact alone could not account for her racing heart and mad desire to see him again. She was roused by Hazel knocking at the door.

"It's almost 7, Miss Anna."

"But your Papa hasn't come yet."

"He should be here any minute now. He's on his way. Have everything all ready to serve," Anna said, jumping from the tub.

The color was high on her smooth olive cheeks. Her blue eyes looked excited and eager.

"But he must have been a little interested in me," she thought, "or he wouldn't have told me his name."

She had wrapped a blue flannel bathrobe about her glowing body and was entering her room again when the doorbell rang.

"That's Papa," Tanya cried. "Let me go!"

Her feet pattered down the long hall and there was the sound of the door being opened, followed by silence. A silence which penetrated even to the back bedroom where Anna was.

She called, "Who is it, dear?"

There was no answer, but a heavy, measured tread which Anna rushed to meet. Two men were carrying her father on a stretcher. His face was ghastly, but he was conscious.

"Don't be frightened, Anna," he said. "It's nothing!"

But she knew better.

"What has happened?" she demanded.

"He was knocked down crossing Market street," one of them said. "He wouldn't let us take him to the hospital. Where shall we put him?"

"In my own bed," pleaded Peter. Anna ran to turn down the satin lined spread. How gaunt and pale he looked in Connie's black and silver room!

"I'll call the doctor!" she suggested, but Peter shook his head. His glazing eyes went past her to the frightened child.

"Tell Connie," he murmured, "I always hoped she'd come back. Promise me you will tell her that."

The terrified girl knelt by his bed.

"I promise," she whispered.

As if her words were the release for which his tired soul had been waiting, Peter sighed and sank back upon the lace covered pillow. He died as he had lived for more than five years, with Connie's name on his lips, Connie's image uppermost in his mind.

It had happened so suddenly. Anna was utterly incapable of comprehending that her father really was gone.

Peter had many old friends who came to offer their services to the bereaved girl. She received them gratefully and followed their advice like one in a dream. But it was her lawyer-employer who forced her to consider the practical side of her situation.

The day after the funeral Leslie Cosgrove went through her father's papers, frowning as he examined the insurance policy which was all of financial value Peter Stahl had left.

"How much were the funeral expenses?" Mr. Cosgrove asked.

"About $600. The insurance will more than cover them."

"It would have," her employer corrected, "if he hadn't borrowed the limit on it five years ago."

"Five years ago was when he furnished the flat for Connie," Anna thought.

That night after she had put Tanya to bed, Anna sat alone in Connie's blue and gold living room. It occurred to her then that she had not kept her promise to her father. She had agreed to tell the woman, who had deserted him for another man, that his last thought had been of her. Just how binding should a promise be under such circumstances? When Connie married her Englishman, hadn't she forfeited all rights to be told anything about her first husband?

"She doesn't deserve it," Anna decided. "But I promised him, so I'll have to do it."

Seating herself at the desk she wrote as brief a note as possible, concluding, "He made me promise to tell you that he had always hoped you'd come back."

* * *

SHE hadn't mentioned Tanya. Connie wouldn't want her, but for one black moment Anna wondered if it wouldn't be necessary to send the child to the mother who had never cared for her. Without her father's salary, it would be impossible for them to continue living in the flat. Neither could she afford to keep Hazel, whose pay had been Anna's responsibility. She looked up to see a small pajama clad figure stealing down the hall.

As if she understood the reason for Anna's preoccupation, Tanya asked, "What's the matter, Anna?"

"Nothing, darling! Run on back to bed before you catch cold."

"But you look so sad, Anna dear! Does anything worry you?" the child persisted, climbing into the girl's lap, wrapping warm, little arms about her neck.

"You won't send me away, will you?"

"Not if you don't want to go, my pet."

"I don't! Not ever," Tanya insisted.

How could anyone with an ounce of feeling have deserted a child like that? She was so gay and lovable. So uncannily wise and sweet.

"No matter how hard it is, I'll have to manage some way," Anna decided.

Picking up the evening paper she scanned the "ads" for room and board. If only she could find some kind-hearted landlady who would be willing to look after the child while Anna was at work. There must be someone in San Francisco who would be glad of the extra money Anna could pay, which would still be less than Hazel's services had cost.

She marked those which looked promising and decided to go to see them the following Sunday. Then she found herself turning to the radio section to see what time Carey Dennison would be on the air.

Here it was, "8:30 p. m. KPC Franklin Carrol's orchestra, Carey Dennison, tenor."

Throughout the sorrowful days which had followed their meeting, Anna had often thought of him. The memory of the darkly attractive features beneath the dripping hat brim was etched indelibly in her mind. She had only to close her eyes to hear him murmur, "In that case we really are more or less old acquaintances."

She could have repeated their conversation word for word. But for days she had not been in the mood to listen to the radio. She went to it tonight as if it were her friend, turning the dial to KPC. In a few moments the sound of Carey's voice, as vibrant and magnetic as the man himself, filled the room. The paper fell unheeded from Anna's lap as she sat listening.

If she only had someone like Carey Dennison for a friend, she would not be so lonely. The young men she knew were so crude or so conceited that she couldn't imagine herself caring seriously for any of them. Carey was different. How proud and happy the girls must be whom he called his friends.

Anna wondered if he were in love with any of those who broadcast from the same station. There were several whose names had become familiar to her on the long evenings when she and Peter had listened to the radio. Martha O'Rourke, Mitzi La Rue and Rita Lang. Which of them did Carey prefer? Which one loved him? How could any of them look into those dark compelling eyes and not be lost?

* * *

How flattered Carey would have been if everyone turned off the radio when he had finished as quickly as did Anna Stahl!

Next morning she began the search for a new home. It seemed to be a fruitless one. No trouble whatever to find satisfactory quarters for herself, but the fact that she must have suitable care for Tanya complicated the situation. The few landladies who professed themselves willing to undertake such a responsibility were not a type which Anna felt she could trust.

She was about to return home tired and discouraged, but decided to investigate a house advertised on Webster street. She found an old fashioned flat, not too promising.

"I don't suppose there is any use, but I may as well stop and ask," Anna thought, wearily.

"Yes, I've a room to rent," she said. "No other roomers and it's a good big room with an alcove and a separate bath."

"It's just the thing," Anna thought, surveying the freshly papered walls and plain, clean furnishings. "But what about Tanya?"

She had been disappointed so many times that day she dreaded another refusal.

"I don't suppose you'd be willing to look after my little half sister while I'm at work?" she asked doubtfully.

"How old is she?"

"Four and a half."

"That's just the age of my little girl when she died over 20 years ago," she said. "I could try it. We can see how we get along."

"Do you mean you would be willing to?" she repeated.

Mrs. Steele said, wistfully, "I'd love to have a baby in my house again. You see my son is going to be married next month. That's why I'm renting this room. He's afraid I'll be lonely."

Anna liked everything about the little woman. Her face was as open and engaging as a child's. Her print dress was freshly ironed anad as clean as her immaculate rooms.

When she asked, "Would you object to my bringing my own furniture?" Mrs. Steele replied, "Not a bit. There's not a lot in here anyway. I can use some of it myself and put the rest in the basement."

Anna promised to send Tanya over the next morning so that they could get acquainted, and left feeling that her most difficult problem had been solved.

A busy week followed. It was no small task to get rid of the expensive furniture her stepmother had selected. Although its original price had been high enough to plunge her father into debt, Anna found it would bring practically nothing secondhand. She disposed of it, however, as well as she could and, on Friday, moved her own things and Tanya's to the room on Webster street.

* * *

HER four-poster bed and the white draped dressing table seemed to belong in the large, square room. She had kept the mahogany desk and the bookcase, also. They had belonged to her father and had been Connie's sole concession to his taste. They gave Anna's room an added dignity and cheerfulness. Across the alcove, containing Tanya's bed and small chest of drawers, Mrs. Steele had hung inexpensive curtains of flowered cretonne.

"It's nearer a home than any place I've lived in since my mother died," Anna thought, surveying it that first night when she returned from work.

"I hope you're going to be happy here," Mrs. Steele said, glancing at Tanya, who was seated on the floor busily arranging a set of blocks.

It had been love at first sight between the child and the older woman.

"She told me to call her Auntie," Tanya said to Anna. "And let me make a little pie all my own and bake it in the oven. But I'm not going to eat it. I'm saving it for Jimmy."

"Jimmy is my son," Mrs. Steele explained. "He is a radio announcer for KPC."

"KPC?" she repeated.

Mrs. Steele continued, "Yes! He's engaged to one of their singers. Mitzi La Rue. You've probably heard her sing."

"Many times," Anna answered.

She wanted to ask about Carey Dennison, but found she could not mention his name. But, of course, Jimmy knew him. He must know him, Anna thought.

Jimmy's mother, unconscious of the reason for it, but pleased with the interest Anna was showing, said, "Mitzi isn't exactly the kind of a wife I should have chosen for my boy, but mothers haven't much to say about such things. He is so madly in love with her. Sometimes I think it isn't sane to be as crazy about anyone as he is about that girl."

For cream or milk stains use cold water first for soaking purposes, and then soap and cold water.

On Broadway

By Walter Winchell

Faces About Town: The Gary Coopers (Sandra Shaw) pausing in their swanky machine for the lights at the Queensboro Bridge. . . . Ramon Navarro and a middle-aged lady "truckin'" into Leon & Eddie's sin salon. . . . Rouben Mamoulian, the gelatin genius, thrilled at Eighty-second and Columbus in the middle of the night—watching a corp of cops try to subdue a cop-fighter. . . . Dario, the dancer, who is splitting from Louise Brooks to reunite with Diane at the Persian Room in the Plaza next week. . . . Frances O'Day, who was so beautiful in the Casino de Paree nudist division, limping and scarred from her recent and horrible motor collision. . . . Wallace Beery, hatless, ankling South along Fifth avenue and attracting pavement-congested attention. Never saw such a crowd collect about a celebrity. . . . Secretary of State Flynn, a proud father of a girl! . . . There goes Drucilla Strain of "Anything Goes." She will wed Don Haggerty, a Yale student of Westchester, any day. The betrothal headlight she wears blinds you.

Street Scenes: Prof. Smith of the Versailles orchidstra, in his dinner clothes, slumbering on a fire hydrant near the place between fox-trots . . . Pushcart merchants at 4 a. m., doing a heavy trade at the 117th and Lenox corner (Satdees only). . . . The stiff sleeping it off in a garbage can at 124th and Amsterdam at 3:30 a. m. . . . The leather-lunged fat housewife in front of the West Forty-seventh Street Station House yelling to occupants of a ptrol wagon: "Keep yer mout' shut, Abe, keep yer mout' shut!" . . . The legless news vendor in front of Saks' Thirty-fourth who has a sensayuma. . . . When you buy a gazette and ask him: "How do you feel?" he clowns: "Couldn't kick if I wanted to."

Memos of a Midnighter: Overheard: "A wrong guy doesn't get to be a right guy when he goes broke. He merely gets meek! . . . Add new rackets: A woman near Macy's causing a commotion by screaming: "Stop that thief! He stole my pocketbook!" . . . When the police brought him back to her she served him with a summons. . . . Overheard in a dreary night club: "There must be an easier way than this to get tired!" . . . If you look closely at Gropper's mural of Cuban plantation life (in Schenley's Cocktail Room on Fortieth street), the overseer on a horse is none other than Grover Whalen! . . . The puckish Gropper couldn't resist kidding Whalen, who is chairman of the Schenley Board. . . . Mumford in the New Yorker praised it as the finest mural of the year! . . . Leo Reisman says B'way is called The Main Stem because it has the biggest thorns.

Snapshot of a Sap: It happened about 1 o'clock the other night near 101st street and Amsterdam avenue. . . . One of the Police Dept. glee club coppers, a man of about 52, was patrolling the beat and once-overing the neighborhoodlums. . . . For no reason at all, while his back was turned, one of the local loafers broke an empty milk bottle over the cop's conk. . . . And this is what followed: Somebody phoned the police for help, and you have no idea how fast they get there when the dispatcher bellows: "101 and Amsterdam, assist a patrolman!" . . . When one of their own is in distress, the patrol cars from even the other precincts speed there and come out swinging. . . . And so they locked up the lad and at the 100 street station house he was searched and on him they found dozens of pawn tickets. . . . From the pawn ducats a series of robberies was solved, and from his fingerprints it was discovered he had already done three terms in the hoosegow. . . . Meaning that if found guilty for his latest exploits, under the Baumes Law, he goes away for life! . . . And for hitting a cop—the idiot!

Ten Reasons for Not Becoming a Newspaperman: 1: A newspaperman is not a writer. He is a carpenter who hammers words together. . . . 2: The only thing romantic about a newspaperman's life is the time spent with his wife or honey—about two hours a week. . . . 3: The chances for advancement are slimmer than Greta Garbo after a Turkish bath, and promotion means only more work, more responsibilities and less gratitude. . . . 4: They are assigned to banquets, but all they have time for are the speeches. . . . 5: They are pestered to death by publicity hounds—but the only time reporters get publicity is when some Judge wants them to betray their professional honor. . . . 6: They spend their lives covering dull and colorless assignments, and when something really exciting happens, such as the Hauptmann Horror, everybody is sent to cover the event except newspapermen. . . . 7: Newspapermen, on the whole, earn so little money that they can't resist the temptation to write bad plays and movies. . . . 8: The only interesting people a newspaperman meets are the members of his family whom he doesn't meet often enough. . . . 9: Too many people have the illusion that an invitation to a night club, a pass to a show, or a half-dollar drink is the price for getting a mess of tripe printed in the papers. . . . 10: Newspapermen are called Fourth Estaters, but most of the time they are treated like fourth offenders.

BUT THAT'S WHAT CIVILIZED PEOPLE GET FOR TAKING ME UP

When the hors d'oeuvres tray arrives
What structural feats invite;
What seasoned art, when Gastronomy
And Geometry unite!
Pickled prunes with pistachio hearts,
Broiled in a bacon curl;
Deviled cocks' combs and shredded smelts,
With onions, Bermuda and pearl;
Expensively decomposing cheese
That's curried with sturgeon slivers,
And rattlesnake meat in a minced melange
Of truffles and pheasant livers.

BUT the hostess putting on all this dog
Just gives me a baleful glare,
As I futilely fumble to snag the most
Innocuous tidbit there.
But they're never that, and I'm always caught
While I'm trying to slip the mess
To the family cat, who spurns it, too,
While I nervously confess—
A cultured palate is not my boast;
I'd really rather have buttered toast.

AND then, when the gracious, smiling host
Brings forth liqueuers and wine,
And all the various liquid fruits
Of the ubiquitous vine,
I look upon it when it's red,
And, too, when it's brunette,
The yellow and the green chartreuse,
The creme de violette;
In straw-bound flagons, stone carafes
And musty wooden casks:
In silver ewers, clear Lalique
And slim Venetian flasks;
And I hear of bodies and brands, bouquets,
Of the sparkling, the still and the dry,
And which side of which special hill
The grapes grew on, and why.

BUT the host who's putting on all this dog
Is righteously wroth with me,
His best champagnes only make me sneeze,
And his Goldwassers disagree.
I dump my drinks, but I'm always caught;
And they know where to put the blame
When the potted lobelias wilt and die,
While I wish that I'd do the same.
Ah, wretched, luckless and tragic maid!
What I'd really like is a lemonade.

Things That Can Be Read From Faces

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

A READER sends me two newspaper cuttings, one from London and one from Iowa, each of which has something to teach us.

The London paper tells about a man who had been blind from an early age, and who suddenly received his sight by the magic touch of a great surgeon. He was telling a reporter how things looked.

The world, he said, was very different from what he had imagined it to be, especially the faces of people in the street. He had known them only by their voices, and their faces did not fit their voices.

Slim people he had thought were trim and finely formed. He found they were often angular. Fat folk he thought were like bottles—little necks and big bodies.

But what struck him most was the anxious, weary, care-worn expression on the faces of so many, as if they were bowed down with heavy burdens of fear or regret and had not a hope left.

It seemed strange to him that anyone, living in a world of light and color, from which he had been so long shut out, should find life so hard, so care-ridden, as if tired of it all.

All of us have noted the calm, almost unearthly beauty on the faces of the blind—the serenity of those who have accepted their lot. But this man who had been blind wondered at the faces he saw.

The other clipping tells of the death of a well beloved minister in an Iowa town, two years after he resigned his pastorate. When he laid down his work a business man of the city remarked:

"The city of Clarinda could well afford to pay him a salary, if thereby we could keep this man of God in our community, just to walk up and down our streets!" What a shining tribute to a face!

Only to walk up and down the streets of the city—what good would that do? It would at least show a love-lit life!

When Thanks Are Correct Or Improper

Invitation to Sit Down Usually Needs No Word of Appreciation.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

I THINK that when one goes to the house of friends and the host invites one to sit down, "Thank you" in reply is only courteous and should be said. (2) Also that it is not wrong, after dining with friends, to say something complimentary about the dinner itself when leaving. (3) My brother contends that too many "thanks yous" can spoil the effect of sincerity and that a general appreciation of their invitation when leaving, and some-thing sometime in return for their hospitality, are a great plenty. If you will give us your opinion, the argument will be nicely settled.

Emily Post

Answer: It is as out of place to thank a friend for inviting you to sit down as it would be to say thank you for speaking to me! On the other hand, you would thank her (or him) for getting a chair or for making any effort in finding a place for you to sit. And if you go to see a person of importance about something that concerns you more than him (or her), and the giving of his time is a favor to you, you would then say "thank you" when invited to sit down. (2) In this you are right. It is proper to say "thank you" for a pleasant evening and a very delicious dinner. Or, "I've had a wonderful time and I never ate such good food!" (3) I think your brother is right in that too much thanking can be almost as displeasing as no thank at all. To say "thank you" when taking leave, or when there is any real occasion, is necessary, of course.

Dear Mrs. Post: I went to lunch alone the other day and later two young men from my same office, neither of whom I see outside of the office, sat at the table with me. They ate hurriedly and went out ahead of me, and when I looked for my check later, was told that the tall young man had paid for my lunch. When I got back to the office I insisted that he let me pay for my lunch, and after much arguing he said that etiquette called for his action even if he hadn't wished to pay for it. What could I have done, and is such a thing true?

Answer: No, there was no reason whatever for his feeling obliged to pay for your lunch. On the contrary, his manner of doing it was in exceedingly bad taste and his explanation inexcusable. Had he said he paid for it because he wanted to, you would have thanked him for his kind intentions, but even so, you would have been right in telling him that you preferred to pay for your own lunch. But in answer to his remark about paying unwillingly, you might have told him that etiquette exacts consideration of others, and that his behavior put you in a humiliating, dependent position, and that you hoped he would never repeat it.

Zodiac of the Seasons.

If you look up your Moon position in an almanac of your year of birth, be careful that you don't get mixed up. The constellational position is often of no value. It should be in the Zodiac corresponding to the seasons, the same as the Sun position, and some almanacs are not careful, to make this distinction. Puddle Muddle's Lamb Friend Asks For a Meadow

By Mary Graham Bonner

"BAA, baa," bleated Sweet Face, the lamb, as he looked around at the other Puddle Muddlers.

"Is there anything you want?" asked the little man, Willy Nilly, stroking his side whiskers.

"I think it would be nice," said Sweet Face, "if we used that little field between here and Top Notch's general store for a meadow. It isn't such a bad piece of land and if we planted some grass seed it might make a lovely meadow."

"No-o-o," answered Sweet Face, "but Willy Nilly has some."

"That's true," said Willy Nilly. "I'll give it to you."

"Thank you very much," answered Sweet Face.

Then he looked at the other Puddle Mudders and said: "It would be fun, I think, if we all went over there while I was doing the planting."

"Caw, caw," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow, "you don't want any help, do you?"

"What was that you said, Christopher?" asked Sweet Face, looking sweetly at the crow.

"Nothing," answered Christopher, although to himself he said: "Before we know it we'll be doing the work for him.

They took the grass seed and all went over to the field.

"Now I wonder which would be the best way to plant the seeds," bleated Sweet Face.

"I'll show you," said Willy Nilly.

"I knew it. I knew it," cawed Christopher to himself.

DURING THE HOT DAYS AMERICA WORKS IN ITS SHIRT SLEEVES!

A Calgonized Shirt is Twice as Cool!

★ After months of constant laundering any fibrous cloth becomes a victim of lime soap residue, a harsh, irritating deposit which naturally shuts out a normal flow of air through the pores of the cloth. In the case of shirts, undergarments, or even summer suits, an unnecessary summer discomfort is therefore brought about. The discomfort is all the more acute because this soap deposit is absolutely insoluble in water.

One rinse in our Calgonized solution destroys every vestige of this soapy residue, leaving the cloth cleaner, cooler, more comfortable than ever before. Calgonizing literally AIR-CONDITIONS your clothing by removing this fiber-clogging deposit.

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. —Chiseling is merely a new name for a vice as old as human nature. It is the effort to secure something without paying the full price. Jack Paterson, writing in McLean's Magazine, mentions, among others, chiselers who read the main parts of books and magazines at the bookstore on pretense of "examining them." Men do most of this. Women chiselers specialize in finding a soiled spot on a dress—even putting it there sometimes themselves and securing a reduction; or they have dresses sent on approval, wear them an evening and return them as "unsatisfactory." A friend of mine chisels by eating more crackers with his soup than the restaurant allows. My main chiseling is reading the newspaper headlines as I pass the newsstand.

2. Verner Martin Sims of Alabama University, studied hazing in 69 colleges and found that in nearly all colleges where severe penalities were visited on hazers, the practice was common and serious, but where there was almost no effort to stop it, and it was left to student control, there was little or no hazing. However, since nearly all the colleges reporting hazing as a serious problem, were in one limited section of the country, the author thinks it possible it may have been the social ideals of that section rather than the severe penalties that increased the hazing. It looks probable, however, that the prohibition of hazing increased the practice.

3. —Nearly all the great women of history have been about as famous for their attractiveness to men as for their intellectuality. Sappho, the immortal Greek poet, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, George Eliot, Catherine the Great, the Duchess de Longueville—not to mention noted women of our time—are examples. As noted by Olive Schreiner in her "Woman and Labor," George Sand when old, stout, reeking with tobacco and untidy, yet attracted some of the greatest men of her time.

Dream Come True

By G. C. Coler

MARTHA was surprised to see Andy standing on the corner; and it was raining, too. When she came up to him he looked altogether dejected, thought he tried to look as though he were happy. Tried to look happy for her.

"What's the matter?" Martha asked, because she knew it wasn't natural. Andy hadn't waited for her at that place for over a year. And when she chanced to meet him, because she purposely walked by his house, he didn't look happy or try to seem so. In fact, his seeing her appeared to make him rather unhappy for some reason or other.

"Oh, I just thought something was the matter and"——

"No, nothin' is the matter. Why should there be, huh?" Andy said and he did smile—a sort of worn smile. "I just thought I'd walk you home. I just thought I would if you don't mind."

"I don't mind," Martha said, and she knew Andy was not telling the truth. She knew something was bothering him.

Even bothered, even needing a shave and with his suit needing a press—even yet he was handsome and heartbreaking. Martha could not help, despite all her trying, that flutter of bewildering excitement from coming upon her.

A long time before, two and a half years ago, or maybe three, Martha had met Andy at a dance and that night Andy had kissed her.

It had been two and a half years ago, or maybe three, but Martha had never forgotten that kiss. It had been part of her life ever since. He had only given her one present, a bit of Dresden, a figure of a boy with a blue coat and red trousers. It stood on her dressing table like a kind of unfading flower.

But after Andy had taken her out three or four times he didn't call her up any more; he didn't come to see her. Foolishly, she had called him—and it had been terrible; he actually laghed. She learned that he hung out in a poolroom. She didn't think he could possibly be that kind of fellow but she had gone four blocks farther on her way home from work one night and she saw him in there.

Martha couldn't help it; she waited in a doorway until he came out. She tried to walk up to him nonchalantly, but she knew she was blushing, and she knew her lips were trembling.

"Listen, sister," Andy had said through his teeth while a cigarette hung from his lips, "you're just making a sap out of yourself. For your own good, I'm tellin' ya, forget all about me."

She had said a few miserable words. Andy had ever too politely tipped his hat, and then had walked away. She was left standing there. . . . When she got home she made up a story for being so late to her mother and father.

Time passed, day after day, week after week . . . and months and even years. . . . There was nothing but the memory of the kiss, a piece of Dresden, and pain that sometimes seemed unbearable. . . . Now and then, when no one was looking, she would walk by the poolroom, or by his house, hoping to see him. Sometimes she did see him.

Suddenly now, for no apparent reason, she had found him on this rainy day waiting for her as he had waited only once or twice before so long ago.

They walked along now in the rain. His cap was at an angle on his head, the cigarette between his lips was soggy and his hands were dug in his pockets.

"It's an awful day, ain't it?" said Andy.

• • •

MARTHA had studied piano once and she could still play decently enough. She liked good books and the better movies. She was one of the most dependable stenographers in the office where she worked.

"Yes, it is a bad day," said Martha and then she couldn't hold herself back any longer. "Why did you wait for me, Andy? There is something, I know. What is the matter?".

"Aw, nothin'. Let's forget about it," Andy returned.

• • •

"WELL, if you waited for me in the rain, there must be something important. I know you didn't just wait to see me."

"Sure, I just waited to see you. What makes ya think I didn't? I know I ain't treated you right, maybe, but I know you're a swell girl. I really like ya, Martha."

Even though she knew all along there was something he wanted, she couldn't help the surge of excitement from passing through her.

"But you do want something, don't you?" she asked.

"Well, I was gonna ask you a favor. Gee, you don't even give me a chance to get started. Anyway, here goes. I need five bucks. I just can't get a break. I've been out of a job fer so long I don't know what work is. I think I got something now that will pan out. If you think you can let me have the fiver——" Andy looked at Martha.

"Of course I can," Martha said quickly and opened her purse. She fished out five single dollar bills for him.

"You are a real sport, Martha. You're O. K. I could go fer a girl like you."

They were standing in her doorway now. As Martha saw Andy counting the money she was filled with repulsion. This was the man she thought she loved, this was the man she had dreamt about, this . .

Andy stuck the money in his pocket and suddenly he bent over and kissed her. Then, smiling, he turned to go.

"Don't go!" Martha caught his arm. "Don't go," she repeated. "If you ever need more money let me know. Oh, Andy—I'm working, Andy, I just thought. Why not let us get married. I'm working and that will be enough for us until you get a job. I'm making $30 a week."

NEVER AGAIN will I be satisfied with the old "paper layer" type of sanitary napkin. The new Modess is so much softer, fluffier . . . more comfortable. And it's safer, too. It has longer tabs that can't pull loose from the pins. It can't strike through. That's why it's called "Certain-Safe."

• • •

Neither Ziggy nor Will felt too optimistic about their chances on the Amsterdam roof. Hearst insisted he would become the greatest monologist on the stage. And he did.

• • •

Will wasn't worried on opening night. He looked at the other stars, patted his hoss and said, "No matter what happens, I'm the only actor here who has transportation.
